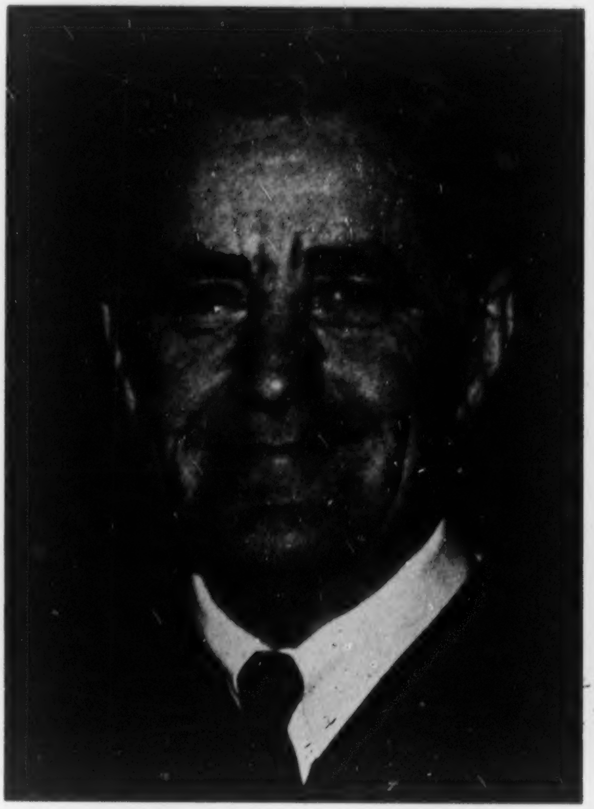
STATE OF THE JUDICIARY MESSAGE

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY — 1989

Earlier this month, a significant event occurred in the life of the Judiciary with the publication of the report of the Commission on the Future of the Virginia Judicial System. Since this document may affect the direction the courts take for years to come, I want to share with you some general observations from the report about what the future holds for our court system.

As those who have read the report know, it does three major things. First, it offers a glimpse of the demographic, social, economic, environmental, political, and technological trends that will shape the future of society and it identifies the specific impact these trends will have on the judicial system. Next, it defines a mission and a philosophical statement of purpose which will serve as a foundation upon which our system can effectively function. Finally, the report suggests a blueprint of how to develop the Commission's vision of the preferred future. Thus, the Commission has prescribed a philosophical sense of purpose for the Judicial System and has recommended a practical sense of direction.

The report notes that several basic propositions must be considered when we look to the future of the court system. First, society in general is being transformed at an unprecedented rate. Second, the future direction of the Justice System must be viewed within the context of global as well as local issues. Finally, technologies of the present and future will profoundly alter the court system's operation and its methods of delivering justice. While keeping these considerations in mind, the Commission focused its energies upon identifying emerging trends and on calculating the future effect of these trends.



Thus, the Commission has prescribed a philosophical sense of purpose for the Judicial System and has recommended a practical sense of direction.

In the area of demographics, the Commission reports that the United States will experience steady growth in the coming decades, increasing from the current population of 246 million to 300 million by the year 2030. In contrast to this 22 percent gain, Virginia's population will grow by 43 percent during this time period, from 5.8 million currently to 8.3 million by the year 2030.

An important factor in population growth is the number of people who are migrating into the state. Only a handful of states attract more immigrants than Virginia. In the future, persons moving into the state will account for more than one-half our population growth. Newcomers may bring new outlooks, speeding the transition from the old to a new dominion.

The fastest growing segment of the population, both in Virginia and in the nation, is the elderly. By the year 2020, one in five Virginians will be 65 or older. Obviously, the "graying" of Virginia's population will bring an older constituency into the courts. In civil cases, the use of the courts to settle estates will increase and this use will come predominantly from women who outlive their husbands. Intergenerational conflict over the control of family assets may be brought increasingly to the courts for resolution. Requests for appointments of guardians may grow along with cases of age discrimination, retirement disputes, and conflicts involving the care of the elderly people.

Increased longevity will be accompanied by complex legal questions involving life-sustaining technologies and right-to-die issues, the ethics of biotechnology, and other medical advancements such as organ transplants.

A major portion of the federal budget growth reflects increased expenditures for entitlement programs. Since most federal entitlement programs involve a federal/state match in funding, increased federal outlays require increased state expenditures. Because entitlement programs have grown at a faster rate than the federal budget as a whole and projected demographic trends tend to indicate a continuance of this pattern, state government should expect to see a growing proportion of its budget allocated to these programs. This situation promises to intensify competition among government agencies for limited state resources and may reduce available funding for the courts.

Another trend that will affect the courts is the changing philosophy on punishment of criminal offenders. Increased rates of violence — most notably murder, rape, and violent crime accompanying drug trafficking and usage — have led to increased fear of crime and intolerance toward criminal offenders. Such fear has, in turn, led to growing demands for incarceration and lengthy sentences for these offenders. Substantial overcrowding of Virginia prisons has resulted. Some projections estimate that the net annual increase in prisoners will be 1200 to 1500 per year, costing the state tens of millions of dollars each year. So immediate is this problem that Governor Baliles has established a commission to study prison crowding and to make recommendations to reduce expensive incarceration through use of alternative programs.

The demand by the public for stiffer sentences coupled with the reluctance to pay for prison facilities will pressure the courts to customize sentencing in ways that suit the conditions of the offense and the offender while deterring repetition of the criminal behavior. The courts must seek creative methods to distinguish violent from non-violent offenders and must consider as alternatives to prison the possible use of electronic monitoring, drug therapies, and other methods of behavior modification.

Globalization of national economies will further accelerate in the future. Communications satellites and jet travel, global trade and investment, global banking, technology transfer, and immigration are weaving nations together in an increasingly integrated world economy. The potentially spectacular growth of the Pacific Rim and Europe's elimination of trade barriers in 1992 will make the next decade a great challenge to U.S. competitiveness. States like Virginia are especially and increasingly tied to global markets. With its major port, international airports, natural resources, and proximity to the nation's capital, Virginia is in a prime position to play a stronger international role in the coming decades.

The Virginia courts will see expanded litigation in such areas as international business and finance. In turn, litigation involving multinational companies, international patent laws, trade disputes, and foreign co-production and investment will require that judges, lawyers, and other court personnel have more training and expertise in international business and finance.

Technological change is acknowledged almost universally as the driving force of the future. The related technologies of automation, telecommunications, robotics, and biomedicine will profoundly alter the way Virginians think, work, and live. In addition, optics, space manufacturing, bionics, aquaculture, desert greening, and energy source research represent a few of the emerging areas in the technological revolution.

The promises these technologies offer — increased productivity, improved services, widespread access to data, and enhanced ability to cure diseases — are part of this unfolding revolution. Its darker side includes the specter of technologies causing widespread displacement of employees within the workforce, providing information systems that may jeopardize privacy and other constitutional rights, and generating fear that biotechnology will have unexpected and frightening consequences. Courts have only begun to access the vast opportunities and potential threats that technology will pose to justice.

Courts have only begun to access the vast opportunities and potential threats that technology will pose to justice.

Computerization of all court records seems a likely first step in an information revolution within the courts that will move from data collection to data management and analysis and, finally, to changes in court administration as well as the adjudicative process itself.

Medical advances in causes of criminal behavior and treatment of addicted and violent offenders could transform our approach to crime and punishment. New techniques for identifying, testing, and screening for maladaptive conduct are emerging from studies of the chemical and genetic bases of human behavior. Profound changes may occur in the nature and concept of individual rights should these or other scientific means be used to provide treatment in lieu of punishment for criminal conduct.

Given these expected trends, how should the courts respond? The report states that, in the future, courts should be actively managed to provide an array of dispute resolution methods that are responsive to the needs of society. Government has the duty of providing its citizens with a vehicle to resolve disputes in a peaceful fashion. Since disputes differ in nature, the method of resolution required may vary from case to case. Individual litigants must have available the method of resolution best suited to the type of dispute involved and the one most likely to attain the highest standard of justice in a specific case.

The Commission observes that, while the court system should remain as the final means of resolving disputes, the judiciary must assume active responsibility for providing a range of remedies which allows litigants the option of choosing the most appropriate and responsive forum. These alternatives will serve as complements to rather than as replacements for traditional adjudication. Given that justice can be obtained in more places than the courthouse, development of alternative dispute mechanisms must be a joint venture with the community.

The report maintains that, in creating non-traditional resolution alternatives, either by the courts or by the community, methods must be forged which provide an opportunity to deal with the causes of the underlying issues in a dispute. New approaches must provide ways to limit polarization, gain greater acceptance of the outcome, and restore a sense of control to the participants.

To realize this vision of the future court system, the Commission has recommended the expanded development of alternative dispute resolution methods, both within the court system and by community-based providers. Also proposed is the creation of an Office of Alternative Dispute Resolution Services which would coordinate and promote the use of these services.

In further constructing its vision of the preferred future for the courts, the Commission suggests that the impact of changing socio-economic and legal forces must be systematically monitored and that the law must provide both the substantive and procedural bases for responding to these changes. Our justice system is the product of multiple forces both internal and external. Broad socio-economic and legal developments have created the existing justice system with its extensive and intensive use of the courts. The justice system has intrinsic to it a component of supply and demand, with the system supplying its concept of justice and society demanding what it needs.

While the court system should remain as the final means of resolving disputes, the judiciary must assume active responsibility for providing a range of remedies which allows litigants the option of choosing the most appropriate and responsive forum.

The Commission points out, however, that the needs of society change from time to time and that the legal system must be able to respond when change occurs. The laws should provide a framework to regulate and to ensure consistency in governmental action and should reflect the ideals and social values of its citizens. In order to be responsive to both social and technological changes, the substantive and procedural law must be continually reviewed. Coherent and well-informed changes in the law, as well as new laws, are needed in many areas today.

Science and technology have created situations which must be clarified or regulated. Examples of some of the most obvious candidates are new medical technologies such as surrogate parenting and genetic engineering. Other changes such as the "graying" of the population, increases in automation throughout society, the increase in immigration, changes in the roles of women and the composition of households, and matters of public health such as AIDS, need careful and informed study and legislative responses.

In the same vein, broad areas of existing law need to be studied, with a view to change. Areas such as tort, mental health, and environmental law are in need of systematic examination. Institutionalization of this monitoring and review process will better enable government personnel to carry out the aspirations of the citizens and help the courts render decisions which are seen as fair and responsive. The Commission suggests that this can be achieved through the creation of a public corporation known as the Virginia Law Institute, which would conduct an ongoing study of the substantive and procedural laws of the Commonwealth.

In the desired future, the Commission foresees that the public's perception of the courts must be one of confidence and respect. Compliance with the law is dependent to a great degree upon the respect accorded the court system by the people. The reverence and esteem granted to the courts stem not only from actual performance but also from how the public perceives justice to be done.

The public's perception is fashioned in many ways. Key in the formulation of the public's view of the court system is education. A general understanding of the role and responsibilities of the courts in the American system of government must be achieved through the formal school system and must be supplemented on a continuing basis by specific instructional and explanatory materials disseminated by the bench, the bar, and the media.

... the needs of society change from time to time and ... the legal system must be able to respond when change occurs. The laws should provide a framework to regulate and to ensure consistency in governmental action and should reflect the ideals and social values of its citizens.

The Commission makes the point that openness is another factor which facilitates both understanding and acceptance of court actions. Broad access to court proceedings and records encourages effective participation. For those who do participate, the court's demeanor must express the value and dignity of all individuals and not distance or indifference. The court and its staff must create an environment of courtesy and responsiveness to the needs of the public. Equal treatment and respect must be accorded all who conduct business with the court.

The Commission states that the courts must have a mechanism to obtain feedback on their strengths and weaknesses and that they must have the ability to react to identified needs. The need for information on levels of customer satisfaction with the courts and mechanisms to enhance the quality of services delivered are as necessary to the judiciary as they are to the private sector. The Commission further states that development of a consumer research and service development process within the judicial system will allow the translation of the public's opinions and needs into specific consumer-oriented measures to help citizens make more effective use of the legal system.

The need for information on levels of customer satisfaction with the courts and mechanisms to enhance the quality of services delivered are as necessary to the judiciary as they are to the private sector.

In calling for the devotion of greater attention to the needs of the users of the court system, the Commission states that it does not seek to reduce the stature of the legal profession but to enhance it. The fundamental element for any profession is the existence of a direct relationship with the client or user. The legal profession generally and the courts specifically must improve this relationship by listening to the concerns of the clients and by responding to their needs.

Another basic value articulated by the Commission which forms the foundation for the Virginia court system is that all persons should have effective access to justice, with the opportunity to resolve their disputes without undue hardship, cost, inconvenience, or delay. The quality of justice rendered by the judicial system is directly related to the citizens' ability to gain access to the courts, the cost involved in participating, the ease with which a dispute is resolved, and ~~the~~ length of time involved in obtaining final disposition. The courts must be accessible to all those who desire to and are required to use them. Elimination of barriers such as complex procedures, high costs, and delay will reduce the obstacles to obtaining justice and will increase accessibility.

The cost of dispute resolution must be affordable to avoid either an actual or perceived impediment to court usage. The court system must work with the legal community to insure the provision of legal services for those of modest means. The use of clear, concise, and understandable language as well as simple procedures in all court activities will open the courts to a broader spectrum of users and will facilitate their participation and their acceptance of the results.

Elimination of barriers such as complex procedures, high costs, and delay will reduce the obstacles to obtaining justice and will increase accessibility.

Courts should discharge their responsibilities in a timely and expeditious fashion. Delay impedes factual recall, predictability, finality, deterrence, and rehabilitation. Delay engenders injustice and hardship. To avoid delay, the Commission recommends that courts take control of their dockets and institute calendar management practices, such as time standards, aimed at achieving the prompt disposition of all cases.

In criminal cases, delay has the further effect of diluting the deterrent value of punishment. On the subject of punishment, the report states that "[t]he goal of a just system for resolving criminal charges should be deterrence, designed to eliminate repetition of criminal behavior and to protect the public." The report also states that "[s]entence disparity should be minimized by the systematic analysis and dissemination to judges of historical sentencing data."

As an aside, but in very timely fashion, I can tell you that only yesterday the judicial sentencing guidelines oversight committee of this conference, chaired by Judge Ernest Gates, made an interim report to the executive committee on the positive results of the voluntary sentencing guidelines pilot program which has been conducted since July 5, 1988, in six pilot circuits. The purpose of the guidelines project, of course, is to try to minimize sentence disparity by the systematic analysis and dissemination to judges of historical sentencing data.

Although the original plan was to continue the pilot program only until July 1, 1989, Judge Gates' committee recommends the continued use of the guidelines in the pilot circuits until this conference makes its formal decision regarding statewide implementation of the guidelines program. The committee states that "[m]any judges in the pilot circuits have said that they do not want to forego the use of the guidelines after the official termination date of the pilot program."

The committee expects to make its final report some time after July 1, and it is expected this conference's formal decision regarding statewide implementation of the guidelines program will be made this fall. In the meantime, I endorse the committee's recommendation that the pilot program continue in the six pilot until the formal decision is made. The committee, under Judge Gates' leadership, has done a perfectly splendid job, and he and the other members are due a vote of confidence by being permitted to continue their work as they recommend.

Now to return to my subject. The Commission foresees that, in the future, technology will increase the access, convenience, and ease of use of the courts for all citizens and will enhance the quality of justice by increasing the court's ability to determine facts and reach a fair decision. But technology may well add to, not reduce, the workload of the courts. A more attentive, better informed public may use courts more and expect more from them.

Nevertheless, innovations in technology will make the courts more efficient, and, accordingly, will alter the way courts work. Courtroom practices are rooted in centuries of common law, so it may be hard to believe that the future will be much different from the past. But the courtroom of the future and what happens there will be much changed. Live testimony, even live trials, may be less standard.

But the courtroom of the future and what happens there will be much changed. Live testimony, even live trials, may be less standard. Many proceedings will employ sophisticated video and graphic displays. Videotapes may be the official court record, and voice recognition systems will prepare an electronic transcript that is interspersed with the video record. Televised trials may become commonplace.

Many proceedings will employ sophisticated video and graphic displays. Videotapes may be the official court record, and voice recognition systems will prepare an electronic transcript that is interspersed with the video record. Televised trials may become commonplace.

While the judge's job will continue to be determination of the facts and application of the law, the tools judges use — videoconferencing, electronic mail, computer-aided legal research, expert systems — will become customary. The management of the courts — e.g., scheduling, docketing, storage and retrieval of records, internal management functions — will be automated fully. Computer networks will link the courts electronically and will connect the courts and other justice agencies.

The Commission warns, however, that as we strive to become more efficient, we must make sure that the use of technology in the name of efficiency does not depersonalize the courts. The courts already are accused of being indifferent, and the use of technology must not result in callous, mechanical justice. Fortunately, by improving scheduling and other steps, technology can make the courts more considerate of jurors, victims, and witnesses and more responsive to their needs.

In sum, the report expresses what the Commission foresees as the preferred future of the judicial system, coupling expectations of what will be with dreams and aspirations of what should be. You may not agree with the sort of vision the Commission has suggested. I do hope, however, that when you have read the report, it will serve to convince you that there is a need to try to identify future problems and suggest their solutions.

I also hope that after giving the report your objective analysis, you will agree to support those recommendations which, if implemented, would improve the administration of justice in Virginia. In any event, I am sure no one will disagree with what the Commission perceives as our ultimate mission, both now and in the Twenty-First Century:

> To provide an independent, accessible, responsive forum for the just resolution of disputes in order to preserve the rule of law and to protect all rights and liberties guaranteed by the United States and Virginia Constitutions.

THE JUDICIARY'S COMPREHENSIVE PLAN: FINAL REPORT ON IMPLEMENTATION ACTIVITIES

During the past two years, the Judicial Council has monitored the court system's progress in accomplishing the four goals, 22 objectives and 88 action items set forth in the 1986-88 Comprehensive Judicial Plan. At the end of 1988, 78 or 88 percent of those action items had been undertaken or completed. The following review of results achieved through the Plan's implementation in 1988 illustrates the scope of the judiciary's efforts to improve the services and operation of Virginia's 318 state courts.

Completion of the Work of the Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System

An important objective contained in the 1986-88 Plan was addressing long-range issues confronting the judicial system so that courts may remain responsive to the citizens of the Commonwealth both today and in the coming decades. In late 1987, Chief Justice Carrico appointed a 34-member Commission on the Future of Virginia's Judicial System in order to assess the demands likely to face the courts into the Twenty-First Century and to set forth a plan to meet the expected requirements. The Commission and its four task forces met throughout 1988 and held public hearings in five localities in order to gain additional citizen perspective on the numerous issues under study.

The Commission presented its report entitled "Courts in Transition" to Chief Justice Carrico at the State Capitol on May 1st, in conjunction with Law Day 1989. The report was delivered to the Chief Justice on by Robert M. O'Neil, Chairman of the Commission and President of the University of Virginia.

Chief Justice Carrico discusses Future's Commission Report with Justice George Cochran and Robert M. O'Neil.

The report cites numerous projected trends for 21st Century Virginia and analyzes the potential implications of demographic, economic, technological, environmental and other changes on the operation of state courts. The report notes that while courts and all institutions must be able to respond creatively and effectively to the expected challenges, charting a precise course in advance is not possible. Instead, the Commission said Virginia's judicial system must develop an underlying philosophy to guide its future direction and enable the judiciary to respond to changing forces and attitudes of society with a coherent sense of purpose and mission. Thus, as part of its work, the Commission articulated and presented in its report the following statement of the mission of the Virginia judiciary:

> To provide an independent, accessible, responsive forum for the just resolution of disputes in order to preserve the rule of law and to protect all rights and liberties guaranteed by the United States and Virginia Constitutions.

This mission statement evokes several themes which underlie the Commission's conclusions about the future of the courts. Twenty-First Century Virginians, according to the Commission, "will need and expect the courts to resolve disputes justly, administer themselves effectively, and preserve the public trust."

To accomplish these objectives, the report offers ten "visions" for the future of the courts as well as 63 specific recommendations for improving the justice system.

Increasing citizens' access to the legal system and the courts was a high priority cited by the Commission. Thus, numerous measures are advocated within the report to reduce or remove barriers to effective access caused by complex legal procedures, the high cost of litigation, court delays, inadequate court facilities and lack of information on alternative dispute resolution programs. Increased support for legal aid service, the promotion of prepaid legal services, and greater participation by members of the bar in providing pro bono services are proposed in order to remove economic barriers to legal representation for poor and middle income Virginians.

In the future, the court system should offer a range of options for resolving disputes according to the Commission. In order to "fit the forum to the fuss," the report advocates the establishment of additional alternative dispute resolution programs to be developed both within the court system and by community-based providers. Also suggested for experimentation in Virginia is the "multi-door" courthouse concept in which a trained intake specialist assists parties in selecting the most appropriate "door" for resolving their particular dispute, be that mediation, conciliation, arbitration or court adjudication.

Among the most far reaching of the Commission's recommendations are the restructuring of the trial courts into a single unified trial court of general jurisdiction. The Commission believes that the current two-tiered trial court system inhibits the mobilization and concentration of judicial resources where they are most needed. The report calls the overlapping jurisdiction of the two tiers unnecessary and the division of family matters between the two tiers illogical and inefficient. A single unified trial court is advocated in order to provide a more flexible, efficient, and cost-effective system for resolving disputes in the 21st Century. In addition, the Commission recommends the expansion of the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals to include all civil appeals. At present, the Supreme Court hears most civil appeals.

The report predicts an increasingly diverse role for judges in the next century. To facilitate selecting those persons most qualified to fill judicial positions, the Commission recommends the establishment of judicial nominations commissions to be chosen by the General Assembly. Employing this approach, local commissions within each judicial circuit would participate with a statewide judicial nominations commission in the nomination of judges. The commissions' membership would include both lawyers and non-lawyers. Their responsibility would be to seek out the most qualified candidates on their own initiative. The commission would report to the General Assembly the names of persons being qualified for each vacancy. Such nominations would be advisory in nature to the General Assembly or to the Governor (for interim appointments).

The report also emphasizes the need for courts to "catch up" with private law firms, the private sector and other governmental agencies in the use of automation for the increased convenience of all users of courts. The report notes that courts have lagged behind in the development and implementation of automated systems. Under the Commission's recommendations, citizens and lawyers would be able to file cases and other papers electronically from remote locations.

In other areas, the report recommends abolishing jury sentencing, providing public defenders in all judicial circuits as the primary method of providing indigent defense services, providing a full-time Commonwealth's Attorney to be available to every judicial circuit, and permitting administrative disposition rather than court adjudication of certain cases which require little discretion, such as uncontested traffic violations.

To develop a mechanism for obtaining citizen input regarding the judicial system and for increasing the judiciary's responsiveness to citizen needs, the report advocates the creating of a consumer research and service development process within the court system. Development of this capability is expected to enhance the currently low level of public confidence in the judicial system. The report further recommends the establishment of the Virginia Law Institute. This public corporation would be composed of representatives of all three branches of government and would continually monitor the substantive and procedural law of the Commonwealth, annually offering recommendations for changes and additions to the law.

The report will be distributed widely for review and comment both within and outside the judiciary. Following a review by the Judicial Council, the adopted actions will become part both of the judiciary's 1989-92 plan as well as its long-range strategic plans.

Reducing Court Delay/Increasing the Convenience of the Courts to All Citizens

Within the past two years, both the trial and appellate courts in Virginia have initiated efforts to identify factors leading to court delay and recommend measures to expedite case disposition, as well as increase the convenience of the courts to citizens. In addition, outside the judiciary, both the Virginia State Bar and the Virginia Bar Association have examined and issued reports on delay and appellate capacity in the civil justice system.

In Virginia's appellate courts, the Supreme Court of Virginia presented a report to the General Assembly in July, 1988, which examined and collated statistics reflecting trends in the Supreme Court's docket in recent years. As a temporary measure designed to relieve the current backlog, the Supreme Court in late 1987 increased the number of cases argued at each session and opinion assignments by 25%. The report indicated that if the projected increases in the Court's caseload remains consistent, a significant portion of the backlog may be reduced by 1990.

Also, in 1988, the Virginia Court of Appeals began participation as a pilot court in the American Bar Association's Appellate Delay Information Program. The first step in this program has been an analysis of case processing times in the Court. A committee of judges, clerk's office representatives, law clerks, and staff from the state court administrator's office has assembled to develop and recommend case processing standards and time guidelines to the full Court. This project will continue through 1989.

Judges of the 19th Circuit discuss case management Strategies.

In April 1988, the Virginia State Bar Committee to Study Litigation Costs and Delay issued a report which concluded that excessive delay and costs are significant problems in Virginia's civil justice system. The committee recommended that time standards for case processing be adopted and that an in-depth analysis of caseloads, media, teleconferencing, and other technological advances in order to expedite the processing of cases. The report further suggested that the Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure be reviewed with the goal of streamlining the trial process and encouraging the expeditious settlement of disputes. Finally, the Committee's report also recommended that sufficient numbers of law clerks and court administrators be made available to circuit courts.

In the trial courts, a number of circuit courts are developing various approaches to trial management with the aim of expediting both civil and criminal case disposition. Among these is the Fairfax Circuit Court, which secured federal funding in 1988 from the State Justice Institute in order to implement a caseload management and delay reduction program. This program would implement a four track differentiated caseflow management system for civil cases with the goals of creating more accurate and efficient standards for case management, expediting civil dispositions, and creating cost effective methods for scheduling and completing cases.

A statewide analysis of circuit court case processing times was conducted using data from the Courts Automated Information System (CAIS). For the first time, detailed statistics were produced showing the time from filing to disposition in various kinds of cases and by how the cases were disposed. This analysis was presented to circuit court judges at their fall 1988 conference. Additional seminars on caseflow management both for circuit and district courts are scheduled during 1989.

Finally, the Futures Commission report offers a number of proposals designed to address the issue of court delay including recommendations that Virginia courts adopt time standards for the processing of all cases, both trial and appellate, and calendar management practices to reduce the waiting time and inconvenience for the public as well as to expedite litigation through the courts.

Family Law Matters

A continuing objective of the judicial system has been to determine the most effective means for adjudicating family disputes in the courts. In 1987, the Judicial Council received a report from the Judicial Administration Committee recommending the establishment of a pilot project to determine whether consolidating the jurisdiction for family matters into a single court would prove preferable to the present division of jurisdiction between the circuit court and the juvenile and domestic relations district court.

The Judicial Council adopted the recommendations of the report and appropriate legislation was introduced in the 1988 session of the General Assembly. This legislation was carried over to the 1989 session. In 1988, the Judicial Council adopted a statement advocating the creation of a family court pilot project to last at least three years with the results to be evaluated by the Council. During their 1989 session, the General Assembly adopted legislation creating an experimental family.

Under the adopted bill, at least four jurisdictions are to be selected as sites for the experimental family court, with at least one each of the following:

> an urban jurisdiction and a rural jurisdiction in which a juvenile and domestic relations district court judge selected by the Judicial Council hears the divorce cases which were transferred from that jurisdiction's circuit court along with the normal caseload of juvenile and domestic relations district court.
> an urban jurisdiction and a rural jurisdiction in which a circuit court judge selected by the Judicial Council hears the divorce cases which were transferred from that jurisdiction's circuit court together with any other family matters associated with these transferred cases. The circuit court judge would continue to handle his or her normal circuit court caseload in the circuit court.

In the pilot courts, the circuit court will refer a predetermined percentage (between 20-50%) of divorce, affirmation, and annulment cases to the juvenile and domestic relations district court for adjudication of all issues. All appeals in such cases will be to the Court of Appeals.

The facilities and clerk's office of the jurisdiction's juvenile and domestic relations district court will be used for processing all cases in the experimental family court project.

Indigent Defense

In order to improve the ability of the courts to provide a prompt and fair resolution in all legal disputes, the 86-88 Plan supported increased fees for court assigned counsel for indigents and the creation of Public Defender offices where such offices are needed and are cost justified. As of July 1989, fees will have been increased by 30 percent since 1986 and Public Defender offices will have been expanded by eleven offices.

In October 1988, the Special Committee on Indigent Defendants of the Virginia Bar Association issued a report after conducting a survey of judges, Commonwealth's Attorneys, public defenders, and attorneys. The report recommended that the General Assembly establish public defender offices in areas where there is a preference for such offices and where they can be shown to be cost effective. The report also stated that the General Assembly should increase court appointed counsel fees each year with the goal of having Virginia rank in the upper half of the states by 1992. The Committee further recommended that criteria be developed to assist judges in deciding whether specific attorneys are qualified to represent indigents in certain cases and to assist judges in determining what fees and expenses to pay or reimburse court-appointed counsel in given cases including capital cases.

The General Assembly's Joint Subcommittee Studying Alternative Indigent Defense Systems concluded its work in December 1988, recommending a 15 percent increase in court-appointed counsel fees effective July 1989, the creation of an interagency study team to identify candidate localities for Public Defender offices and to examine other issues related to indigent defense, and the continuation of the work of the Joint Subcommittee, expanding its scope to include evaluation of additional funding sources for indigent defense. The proposed 15 percent increase is the first step in meeting the goal of having Virginia rank in the upper half of the states by 1992 in terms of average fees paid to court appointed counsel.

As a result of the Subcommittee's recommendations, the 1989 General Assembly enacted increases of approximately 15 percent in the maximum fees paid to court-appointed counsel. The maximum fee for defending a charge in district court was increased from $86 to $100 while the fee for defending a class 2 felony was raised from $500 to $575. The fee for representing all other felonies was increased from $230 to $265 while that to defend a misdemeanor charge in circuit court was raised from $115 to $132. The legislature also created new public defender offices in Suffolk, in Franklin, Isle of Wight, and Southampton, in Bedford, and in Danville. In addition, the Winchester office was expanded to include Page County. With the addition of these offices, 15 public defender offices now operate in Virginia.

The General Assembly also created an interagency team to develop and recommend a cohesive, cost-effective plan for the operation of a system of legal representation for indigent criminal defendants. The study will provide an analysis of the workload, staffing, and salary levels in existing public defender offices and the recommendation of standards and criteria to be applied to existing and future offices, a comparison of the cost-effectiveness of court-assigned representation versus a public defender system within each judicial circuit, recommendations for implementation of changes in those circuits where a more cost-effective system is identified, and an evaluation of the feasibility of creating a statewide office to handle all indigent appellate cases. The study is expected to be completed in the summer of 1989.

In FY 1988, the Commonwealth spent $11,720,027 on court appointed counsel fees to represent indigents. During the same period, the courts collected $1,671,518 from indigents for such fees. Thus the courts collected just over 14 percent of the amount spent of court appointed counsel fees. This is widely recognized as one of the highest, if not the highest, rate of recoupment of such fees in the nation.

Sentencing Guidelines

As part of the objective to provide fair and equitable sentencing policies in Virginia's courts, Chief Justice Carrico, in 1987, appointed a committee of six judges to oversee the development of voluntary sentencing guidelines. Using sentencing data taken from over 33,000 cases tried in the courts from February 1985 to September 1987, this project is the largest study to date by any state court system of sentencing data. After an in-depth analysis of the factors considered in these sentences, the committee approved experimental sentencing guidelines to be tested in pilot circuits. In December 1988, the Committee approved modifications to the guidelines based on an analysis of more recent sentencing data.

In July 1988, pilot programs were begun in six judicial circuits (the Fourth, Twelfth, Sixteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-first, and Twenty-ninth Circuits) to test the use of these voluntary guidelines. These programs will last one year and will provide the Committee with information to evaluate the advisability of expanding the use of the guidelines statewide. The results of this evaluation will be provided to the Judicial Conference in 1989.

Court Automation

As part of the continuing effort to assist court personnel in the efficient management of court activities, the judiciary continued to expand the use of automation in the courts during 1988.

The Courts Automated System was expanded to a total of 164 courts by the end of 1988. This represented a twenty-four percent increase over the number of courts (124) using the system at the end of 1987. By the middle of April 1989, the number of courts using the system had grown to 178 courts. With the addition of the new courts, the system is now installed in a total of 76 circuit courts, 52 general district courts, 19 combined courts, and 31 J&DR courts. Of the total number of courts on the system, 122 have the Financial Management System and 141 have the Case Management System. The majority of courts have both the Financial and the Case Management Systems.

For users of the Financial Management System, the completion of the replacement of the old cash registers with the personal computers occurred in July, 1988. The use of this device will further enhance the ability of the Financial Management System and the Case Management system to interface. This will save data entry and will allow both systems to operate together. The FMS/CMS Interface has been successfully installed in pilot courts and several other courts during 1988. As of April 1989, over a fourth of the general district courts with both systems had the Interface system. All of the remaining general district courts with both Case Management and Financial Management are scheduled to receive the interface during 1989.

In addition to these projects, work continued in several other areas. A major change to the general district court data base was developed and tested during 1988 and was installed in early 1989. This change was brought about by a joint effort between the Supreme Court and the Department of Motor Vehicles to automate the abstract of judgment on traffic cases occurring in the general district courts. This project will continue in 1989 with a pilot project being run in the Richmond Manchester General District Court. After it has been successfully tested the interface with DMV will be scheduled for other courts.

A joint project was initiated with the Circuit Court Clerk's Association to develop an automated records indexing system. In late 1988, bids were received for hardware necessary for implementation of this project with the final selection of hardware expected to occur in early 1989. Madison Circuit Court has been selected as the pilot court to test the use of the Records Indexing System.

Another project developed in 1988 and implemented in January 1989 involved a case management system for the Supreme Court. The new system, nicknamed SCOLAR, is similar to the system previously developed for and in use by the Court of Appeals.

A financial management system for the juvenile and domestic relations courts similar to that used by the circuit courts and general district courts was developed in 1988. The first phase of this new system was installed in the pilot court, Alexandria J&DR Court, in March 1989. An interface between the Case Management System currently in use in the juvenile and domestic relations district courts and the new Financial System is being developed and will be installed at the same time.

Study of Magistrate Services

A detailed study of the Magistrate System is being conducted by a committee of circuit and district judges, and magistrates. Among the issues being addressed are definition of magistrate functions, both present and future, options of how magistrate services should be delivered, needed characteristics of the system, and the magistrate position and possible uses of technology and automation to improve services provided to the public.

The subcommittee meets on a monthly basis to examine the issues with the full committee meeting on a quarterly basis to review the status of the study. Management information requirements are being developed for automating the magistrate office and a demonstration of equipment available has been made by the Department of Information Technology.

Some specific topics being addressed by the committee are:

- the establishment of objective criteria for determining the number of magistrates per office and for indicating what circumstances would support additional magistrates.
- the development of competitive salary scales and new salary policies.
- the development of an improved performance evaluation system.
- the development of requirements for an information system which would provide support to magistrates in coordinating with the courts, preparing magistrate papers, maintaining magistrate records, and preparing management reports.

Salary Increases for Judges

In order to continue to attract and retain a highly qualified judiciary, the Plan supports increasing judicial salaries with the ultimate objective of salary parity between Virginia's circuit court judges and United States District Court judges. In 1988, the judiciary sought increases of 8.5 percent in the first year and 7.5 percent for the second year of the 1988-90 biennium. The General Assembly approved an increase of 5.98 percent for the first year and 7.5 percent for the upcoming fiscal year.

OTHER JUDICIAL SYSTEM ACTIVITIES

Creation of New Judgeships

In 1988, the General Assembly created three new district court judgeships. New general court judgeships were added in the Second District, the Nineteenth District, and the Thirty-first District, bringing the total number of general district court judges to 107.75.

The 1989 General Assembly added five new circuit court judgeships and three general district court judgeships to Virginia's courts. Additional circuit court judgeships were created in the Second Circuit, the Third Circuit, the Nineteenth Circuit (2 judgeships), and the Twenty-fourth Circuit. Thus, as of July 1, 1989, 127 judges will serve the circuit courts of the Commonwealth. New general district court judgeships were added in the Second District, the Sixth District, and the Twentieth District.

Small Claims Court

On October 21, 1988, the first small claims court in Virginia began operation in Fairfax. Created by the 1988 Session of the General Assembly for a two-year trial period, this small claims court operates as a division, albeit more informal, of the general district court. While special forms for warrants in debt and detinue are provided, the only other pleadings allowed are an answer, a grounds of defense, and a counterclaim. Lawyers may not represent a party although a corporation or partnership may be represented by an owner, partner, officer, or employee. A party may be represented by a non-lawyer friend or relative if that party is unable to understand or participate in the case and the friend or relative is familiar with the case. Cases are tried in an informal manner with the judge having the discretion to admit all evidence of probative value (except privileged communications). The defendant can demand removal of the case to the regular docket of the general district court for trial as a traditional general district court case.

Since the enactment of the small claims court legislation, the Judicial Conference of Virginia for District Courts has requested the Chief Justice to create a committee to study the creation of a statewide small claims court procedure as an alternative to a small claims division or small claims court. This committee is expected to issue its report in 1989.

Support Enforcement

Support-related matters continued to be of significant concern as changes outside of Virginia's judicial system had and will continue to have a substantial impact on litigation of support issues.

Several changes involved the Division of Child Support Enforcement including a reorganization and the addition of personnel in substantial numbers to handle an increased workload. In addition, legislative changes were made to permit wider use of administrative support orders and enforcement mechanisms together with the use of judicial enforcement of administrative orders and administrative enforcement of judicial orders.

Other legislative changes affecting child support litigation were enacted in 1988. The Parentage Act replaced various paternity statutes in the Code of Virginia. A statewide uniform guideline mechanism for determining appropriate child support awards was enacted. While the use of the guidelines mechanism was made binding in administrative proceedings, the 1988 legislation made use in court cases advisory only. The legislation requires that certain information concerning child support orders be reported, included whether the child support guidelines calculations were used in a case.

In 1988, the U.S. Congress enacted the Family Support Act of 1988, requiring states to make numerous changes in both administrative and judicial proceedings which involve child support issues. One change affecting the courts was a requirement that use of a state's child support guidelines be mandatory in court cases and that calculations from the guidelines be a rebuttable presumption of the amount of child support to be awarded. Legislation was introduced and enacted in the 1989 Session of the General Assembly to make this change.

Small
Claims

Judicial Education

Mandatory continuing legal education for district court clerks was instituted in 1988. Under the new clerk's CLE program, all district court employees in grade 10 and above will be required to earn six CLE credits each year. These credits may be earned at the two statewide conferences and the six regional workshops held each year as well as at other educational programs offered by other state and private agencies. In addition, all new district court employees will have to attend a week-long course in Basic Case Management before they can move out of probationary status. New clerks will be required to attend a week-long Clerk's Management Course.

District Court Job Evaluation and Compensation System

Effective July 1, 1988, a new job evaluation and classification system was implemented in the District Court System. This system established the relative value of each position based on a "point-factor" system which scores each position in relation to the following factors:"

- Environment
- Management
- Knowledge Requirement
- Financial Responsibilities
- Mental Effort
- Public Relations/External Contact

A position's total score is the sum of the scores for each factor and corresponds to one of 15 pay grades. The pay grade determines the employee's salary range.

The new compensation system ties salary increases directly to performance. Prior to its implementation, the only available alternatives were to authorize a 5 percent merit increase or to deny the merit increase. With the new system, the merit increase can be denied or up to a 10 percent increase may be approved. The amount of increase depends upon the performance evaluation score for the employee. For those employees that meet the quantity and quality standards established by management, the amount of merit increase is 5 percent. Up to 16 percent of those employees who exceed these standards may receive merit increases of more than 5 percent.

Cameras in Courts

In 1987, the General Assembly created an experimental program allowing cameras in courtrooms of selected courts in Virginia. The program, which was to run for two years, allows television cameras, still photography, and radio recording equipment to be present in the selected courts. The Supreme Court of Virginia, the Court of Appeals of Virginia, the circuit courts in Virginia Beach and Bedford, and the general district courts of Caroline and Charlottesville were selected to participate in this program. The Supreme Court of Virginia was given thee responsibility of administering the program, conducting an evaluation of the experiment, and reporting to the General Assembly by December 1989.

The 1989 Session of the General Assembly extended the cameras in courts program for an additional year. The number of circuit courts participating in the program was also increased from two to three.

Collection of Costs and Fines

In 1988, the General Assembly enacted legislation to provide improvements in the collections of unpaid fines and costs. One of the major changes permits the Commonwealth's Attorney to contract with collection lawyers and collections agencies for the collection of unpaid fines, costs, forfeitures, and penalties pursuant to guidelines promulgated by the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court of Virginia and the Office of the Attorney General of Virginia. During 1988, staff members from both offices devised guidelines as well as a set of required uniform payment/accounting forms and suggested contractual terms for use by Commonwealth's Attorneys. These documents were reviewed by selected clerks of both circuit courts and district courts and by Commonwealth's Attorneys.The guidelines were put into effect in late 1988.

The circuit and district court participate in the debt set-off program in order to enforce the collection of unpaid fines and costs. From January 1 to December 9, 1988 a total of $611,755 in such fines and costs was collected through this program. This was a 57 percent increase over the amount collected in 1987. Recovery of circuit court fines and costs amounted to $244,102 in 1988, a 5 percent increase from 1987. Collection of unpaid district court fines and costs totaled $367,653 in 1988, a jump of 134 percent from the amount recovered in 1987.

INDIGENT DEFENSE SERVICES

In FY 1988, indigent defense costs in Virginia jumped 33 percent from FY 1987. In 1987, the Commonwealth paid $10.8 million for the representation of indigent defendants while over $14 million was expended for such services in 1988. Court-appointed attorney fees increased 28.6 percent while the cost of operating the Public Defender system increased by 60 percent. The increase in the Public Defender system expenditures was due in large part of the creation of new public defender offices in Fairfax, Alexandria, and the area of Frederick, Clarke, and Winchester.

The cost of providing indigent defense increased in every judicial circuit and district with the exception of the Third Circuit which had a drop of 3 percent and the Second Circuit which experienced a slight (-0.3%) decline in such costs. The 10th Circuit and District recorded a jump in indigent defense expenditures of 99 percent while District 2a and the Seventeenth Circuit and District had increases of 70 percent.

Court-assigned counsel fees for defending unclassified felonies jumped 46 percent ($432,825) while fees for representing indigent appeals more than doubled, increasing by $165,954 from FY 1987. The cost of providing guardians ad litem for juveniles jumped almost 72 percent or $219,771 more than in FY 1987.

While the cost of providing court-appointed counsel to indigents increased almost 29 percent in FY 1988, the number of charges represented increased only 13 percent from FY 1987. Thus, the average fee paid to attorneys for representing indigents rose from $93 per charge in FY 1987 to $101 in FY 1988.

The Commonwealth recouped $1,671,518 in FY 1988 from indigents convicted of crimes, about 14 percent of the amount spent on court-appointed counsel fees. This is widely recognized as one of the highest rates of recoupment for such fees in the nation.

INVOLUNTARY MENTAL COMMITMENTS

The Commonwealth spent $6.3 million for involuntary mental commitment proceedings in FY 1988, an increase of almost 28 percent ($1,375,034) from the amount spent in FY 1987. This increase was due in large part to a jump of 43.7 percent ($1,227,871) in hospital costs. The expenses of special justices rose 1.3 percent while the cost of providing attorneys declined slightly (-0.2%). Fees paid to physicians and psychiatrists increased almost 17 percent. The costs associated with witnesses and interpreters, although representing only a small proportion of all IMC expenditures, jumped 330 percent from $990 in FY 1987 to $4,260 in FY 1988.

IMC costs in the general district courts increased almost 25 percent in FY 1988 and represented 84 percent of all IMC expenditures. In FY 1987, the general district courts accounted for 86 percent of all IMC expenditures. In the juvenile and domestic relations district courts, the cost of involuntary mental commitment proceedings increased almost 43 percent in FY 1988 while in combined courts, the amount expended for such proceedings jumped by almost 53 percent.

The cost of detention (hospital costs, fees for physicians and psychiatrists) accounted for 72 percent of all IMC costs in FY 1988. Such costs represented 64 percent of all IMC costs in FY 1987. Detention costs jumped 43 percent, from $3.1 million in FY 1987 to $4.5 million in FY 1988.

Commitment hearing costs, which represent about 13 percent of all IMC expenditures, increased 7.4 percent in FY 1988 while the costs of preliminary hearings (which account for 12 percent of all costs) fell by 13 percent. Recommitment hearings, although accounting for only 2 percent of all IMC expenditures, jumped 80 percent from $85,589 in FY 1987 to $154,321 in FY 1988.

VIRGINIA COURTS

Supreme Court of Virginia

The Supreme Court of Virginia was founded in Williamsburg on August 30, 1779 and has enjoyed a long and illustrious history. Virginia's highest judicial tribunal has roots deep in the English legal system dating to the first permanent English settlement in North America.

Seven Justices serve on the Supreme Court bench. On December 31, 1988, Justice Richard H. Poff retired from the bench after serving more than 16 years on the state's highest court. He was replaced by Elizabeth B. Lacy, the first woman to serve as a Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia.

The Court's original jurisdiction may be invoked by way of petition for mandamus, prohibition, or habeas corpus. Appellate jurisdiction is invoked by appeal or writ of error attacking the judgment of a trial court. The Court hears appeals from circuit courts involving all civil matters (except domestic relations), criminal cases in which the death penalty has been imposed, habeas appeals, and appeals from State Corporation Commission findings. The Court may also become involved in matters of judicial censure, retirement, and removal. Subject to some statutory limitations, cases decided by the Court of Appeals may be appealed to the Supreme Court. In addition, the Supreme Court may, on its own motion or that of the Court of Appeals, certify a case originally appealed to the Court of Appeals for review by the Supreme Court before it has been determined by the Court of Appeals.

The seven Justices of the Supreme Court meet for five-day sessions beginning in October of each year and every seventh week thereafter until completion of the June docket. There is no July session although the Court does hold a three-day session annually in late August or early September.

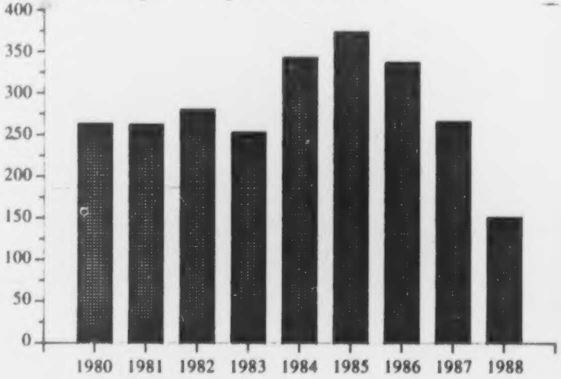
Supreme Court of Virginia:

Cases Waiting to be Argued 1980-1988



When the Supreme Court is in recess, the Justices are involved in legal research upon cases awaiting their decision. They draft and write opinions, study cases in which petitions for appeal have been filed, and conduct hearings on petitions for appeal.

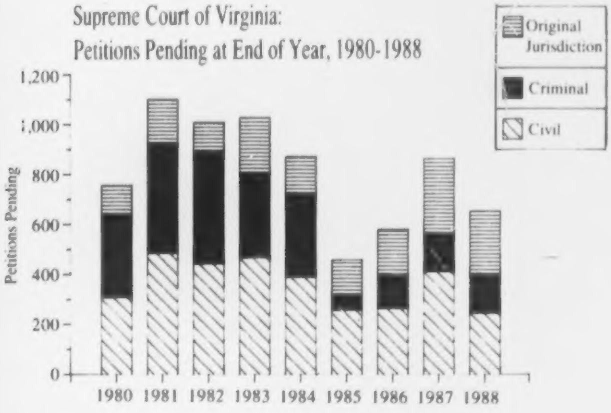
In addition to its appellate functions of examining results reached in lower courts and of redefining and developing the body of state law, the Supreme Court is also responsible for the general supervision of the entire Virginia Judicial System. The Supreme Court is authorized to make rules of practice and procedure and to oversee changes in the organization of the lower courts.

In 1988, the number of filings in the Supreme Court declined slightly, from 1,443 filings in 1987 to 1,439 in 1988. Criminal appeals increased almost 8 percent from 344 in 1987 to 371 in 1988. Civil appeals dropped from 577 to 574 while the number of habeas appeals declined from 52 to 49. Original jurisdiction filings fell by almost 7 percent due to an 11 percent drop in the number of writs of habeas corpus filed. The number of writs of mandamus increased from 64 to 72 while the number of writs of prohibition rose from 5 to 11. There were 371 cases (339 criminal, 32 non-criminal) appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court in 1988, an increase of 32 cases from the number appealed in 1987.

While filings were down in 1988, the number of petitions and original jurisdiction cases acted upon increased by almost 43 percent, from 1,093 in 1987 to 1,560 in 1988. Appellate petitions acted upon increased almost 39 percent from 770 in 1987 to 1,067 in 1988. The number of original jurisdiction cases acted upon jumped 49 percent from 311 in 1987 to 464 in 1988. The increase in appellate petitions acted upon was due almost entirely to an increase in the number of petitions refused. The number of petitions granted increased only 8 percent from 1987. In original jurisdiction cases, the number of petitions awarded jumped 61 percent while the number refused increased by almost 48 percent.

Civil petitions granted as a percentage of civil petitions acted upon dropped from 26 percent in 1987 to about 16 percent in 1988. The percentage of criminal petitions granted remained at just over 3 percent in both years. The percentage of original jurisdiction petitions awarded rose from 10 percent in 1987 to 11 percent in 1988.

There were 403 appeals from the Court of Appeals acted upon 1988, a jump of almost 32 percent from the number acted upon in 1987. The Supreme Court acted upon 66 more criminal appeals and 31 non-criminal appeals from the Court of Appeals than in 1987. While the percentage of criminal petitions from the Court of Appeals granted remained the same (at 3.2%) from 1987 to 1988, the percentage of non-criminal appeals granted increased from 4.2 percent in 1987 to 9.6 percent in 1988.



Supreme Court of Virginia:
Petitions Pending at End of Year, 1980-1988

At the end of 1988, there were 654 petitions pending before the Court, a drop of 224 petitions from the number pending at the end of 1987. The number of civil petitions pending fell from 412 at the end of 1987 to 245 at the end of 1988. However, the number of criminal petitions pending rose from 149 to 152. Habeas corpus appeals pending dropped from 15 to 6 while the number of original jurisdiction petitions pending fell from 302 in 1987 to 251 in 1988.

There was a dramatic decline in 1988 in the number of cases waiting to be argued before the Court. At the end of 1987, there were 266 cases waiting to be argued while at the end of 1988, only 151 cases were waiting. This was the lowest number of cases waiting to be argued since March 1978.

There was an 18.6 percent increase in the number of cases decided by opinion, from 156 in 1987 to 185 in 1988. This was an increase of about 4 opinions per judge. There was a modest (4%) increase in the number of opinions in which judgment was affirmed but a large jump (almost 32%) in the number of opinions in which judgments were reversed or remanded. The number of cases decided by order jumped by 49 percent, from 72 in 1987 to 106 in 1988.

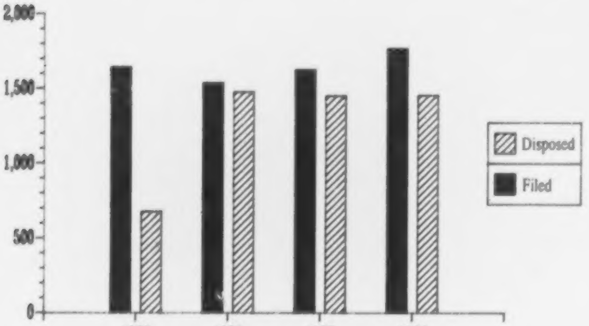
COURT OF APPEALS

The Court of Appeals is Virginia's intermediate appellate court. The Court, established in 1985, hears appeals from the circuit courts in all criminal matters except death penalty cases and in all domestic relations matters. In addition, appeals from decisions of the Industrial Commission and from most administrative agencies are taken to the Court of Appeals. Criminal appeals are heard upon the granting of a petition or writ of error while other appeals are heard as a matter of right.

Ten judges make up the Court of Appeals and sit in panels of three judges in four regional locations. When there is a dissent in a panel to which a case was assigned, the aggrieved party may request and be granted an en banc hearing provided at least two other judges of the Court vote in favor of such a hearing. The Court may also sit en banc if a judge of a panel certifies that a decision of that panel conflicts with a previous decision of the Court or of any panel.

The Court of Appeals recorded 1,768 case filings in 1988, an 8.8 percent increase from the number filed in 1987. The number of criminal appeals rose 5.4 percent from 1,189 cases in 1987 to 1,253 in 1988. There were 455 appeals of right filed in 1988, an increase of 7.8 percent from 1987. The number of domestic relations appeals jumped 15 percent from 195 filed in 1987 to 225 filed in 1988. Industrial Commission appeals declined slightly, from 202 in 1987 to 197 in 1988. The number of Administrative Agency appeals rose from 25 filings in 1987 to 33 in 1988. There were 38 original jurisdiction petitions filed in 1988, up from just 12 in 1987.

Court of Appeals: Cases Filed and Disposed, 1985-1988



Although the number of filings increased by 8.8 percent, the number of dispositions by the Court was almost unchanged, rising by four dispositions from 1987. However, the number of criminal petitions granted or refused increased by 8 percent from 1987 to 1988. Although the Court acted on more criminal petitions in 1988, it granted ten fewer than in 1987. Thus, the Court granted about 26 percent of the petitions acted on. In 1987, the Court granted almost 32 percent. The 1988 percentage is very similar to the percentages granted in 1985 (26.3%) and in 1986 (26.6%).

In 1988, 180 appeals of right and granted criminal cases were decided by opinion, a drop of almost 12 percent from 1987 when 204 were decided by opinion. Cases decided by opinion represented 27 percent of the total cases decided in 1988, compared to 35 percent in 1987. About 53 percent of the cases decided by opinion in 1988 were affirmed, down from 55 percent in 1987. There were 95 opinions that affirmed the judgment of the lower court, 60 that reversed the judgment, and 18 that affirmed in part and reversed in part. Seven cases decided by opinion were dismissed by the Court.

While the number of cases decided by opinion fell in 1988, the number of cases decided by order jumped 28 percent from 371 in 1987 to 475 in 1988. Of the cases decided by order in 1988, 245 or 51 percent were affirmed. In 1987, only 47 percent of the cases decided by order were affirmed. Of the 475 cases decided by order, 245 were affirmed, 54 were reversed, 8 were affirmed in part and reversed in part, 56 were dismissed, and 112 were withdrawn or settled.

There were 371 cases appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court of Virginia in 1988. This represented a 9.4 percent from the 339 appealed in 1987. The number of criminal cases appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court of cases appealed from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court of Virginia jumped almost 13 percent while the number of non-criminal cases appealed dropped from 38 in 1987 to 32 in 1988.

CIRCUIT COURTS

In Virginia, the circuit court functions as the trial court of general jurisdiction with authority to try a full range of civil and criminal cases. In civil matters, the circuit courts has exclusive original jurisdiction over all equity matters (including divorce), disputes concerning wills and estates, and controversies involving property. Circuit courts also have concurrent jurisdiction with the general district courts over claims from $1,000 to $7,000.

The circuit court has jurisdiction over the trial of all felonies (offenses that may be punished by confinement in the State Prison) and over those misdemeanors (offenses whose maximum penalty is not more than 12 months in jail) originating from indictments by a grand jury.

Circuit courts have appellate jurisdiction over all appeals from general district courts and the juvenile and domestic relations courts. These appeals are heard by the circuit court de novo, that is, tried from the beginning as though there had been no trial in the district court. The circuit courts are also empowered to hear appeals from administrative agencies.

The 122 circuit courts in Virginia are arranged in 31 circuits. Eight of these circuits serve single localities while the other circuits serve several counties and/or cities. In 1988, the circuit courts were served by 122 circuit court judges and 122 locally elected clerks.

Judges of the circuit courts are elected for eight-year terms by the General Assembly. Whenever a judicial vacancy occurs in a circuit, the Supreme Court must certify that the filling of the vacancy is or is not necessary. Interim appointments are made by the Governor. Each circuit is served by at least two circuit court judges and as many as 11 serve in the larger circuits. A Chief Judge is elected in each circuit by a vote of the judges serving that circuit. Circuit court judges must reside in the circuit they serve and must have been admitted to the Virginia Bar at least five years prior to their appointment to the circuit court bench.

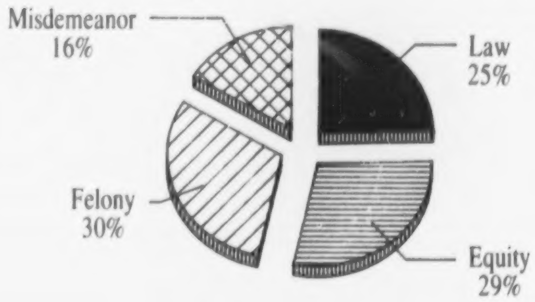
Circuit Courts: Caseload Distribution



Each circuit court is also served by a Clerk, a constitutional officer elected by the voters to an eight-year term. The clerk handles the administrative functions of the court and has authority to probate wills, grant administration of estates, and appoint guardians. The clerk is the custodian of the court's records and the clerk's office where deeds are recorded and marriage licenses are issued.

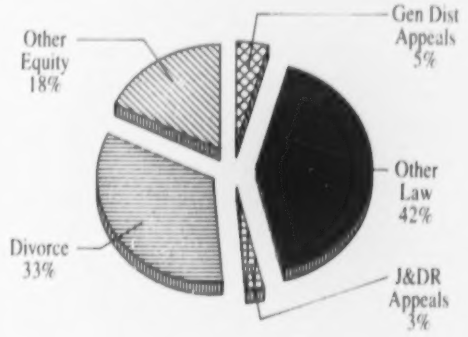
In 1988, the circuit courts reported 177,107 cases commenced and 169,557 cases concluded. This represented a 7.2 percent increase in cases commenced and a 12.5 percent jump in the number of cases concluded. The number of civil cases commenced rose by 8.4 percent while criminal cases commenced increased by almost 6 percent.

The Nineteenth Circuit again reported the largest number of commenced cases (17,688) and accounted for 10 percent of the circuit court caseload in the state. Twenty-eight of the 31 circuits reported increases in the number of commenced cases in 1988. The largest percentage increases occurred in the 17th Circuit (39.6%) and the 12th Circuit (25.2%).

The 122 circuit court judges averaged 1,452 cases commenced in 1988, 101 more cases each than in 1987. Judges in urban circuits averaged 1,527 cases each, up from 1,405 in 1987. In rural circuits, the per judge average was 1,349 cases each, an increase of 72 cases per judge from 1987.

While the number of cases commenced increased by 7.2 percent, the number of cases concluded jumped by 12.5 percent from 150,756 in 1987 to 169,557 in 1988. This was an average of 1,390 cases concluded per judge, 156 more cases per judge than in 1987. In urban circuits, the judges averaged 1,454 cases concluded each while in rural circuits, the average was 1,303 cases concluded per judge.

Circuit Courts: Civil Caseload Distribution, Cases Commenced



At the end of 1988, there were 169,925 cases pending in the circuit courts. This was 4 percent more than were pending at the end of 1987. The circuit court judges thus averaged 1,393 cases pending each at the end of 1988. In urban circuits, judges averaged 1,526 cases pending each while the average for judges in rural circuits was 1,211 cases pending each. Although the number of pending cases in the Third Circuit dropped by 6 percent in 1988, that circuit again had the highest pending caseload per judge average at year's end (2,722 cases). As in 1987, the 22nd Circuit had the lowest per judge average with 820 cases pending per judge.

The number of jury trials increased by 2.4 percent, rising from 4,211 in 1987 to 4,312 in 1988. Thus, the circuit court judges averaged 35 juries impaneled each in 1988, one more than in 1987. The highest averages were reported by the Third Circuit and the Twenty-eighth Circuit which averaged 61 juries impaneled per judge.

Civil

Almost 95,000 civil cases were commenced in Virginia's circuit courts in 1988, an increase of 8.4 percent from the number commenced in 1987. The courts reported 39,258 "other law" cases, 31,536 divorce cases, 16,938 "other equity" cases, 4,270 appeals from the general district courts, and 2,437 appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations district courts. The categories showing the largest increases were "other law" (with 3,914 more cases than in 1987) and "other equity" (with 2,703 additional cases). The number of divorce cases commenced increased by just 297 cases (1%) from 1987.

The statewide average for circuit court judges was 774 civil cases commenced per judge. In 1987, the average was 713 civil cases per judge. The urban average in 1988 was 847 cases per judge while in rural circuits judges averaged 676 civil cases commenced each. These represent increases from 1987 when the urban average was 768 cases and the average for rural judges was 638 civil cases per judge.

The Nineteenth Circuit again reported the largest number of civil cases commenced (11,446 cases) of any of the 31 circuits. This represented 12 percent of all civil cases commenced in the state's circuit courts. The Nineteenth Circuit also had the highest per judge average with 1,041 civil cases commenced per judge. The fewest number of civil cases commenced was reported in the Twenty-first Circuit (1,134 cases) while the Thirtieth Circuit had the lowest per judge average with 518 civil cases per judge.

The circuit courts concluded 90,648 civil cases in 1988, a 16 percent increase over the number concluded in 1987. The number of "other law" cases concluded increased by 5,438 cases (17.5%) while divorce cases rose by 3,535 cases (11.5%) and "other equity" increased by 2,442 cases (20.5%). General district appeals concluded increased by 564 cases (17.8%) while appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations district court rose by 529 cases (38%).

The judges in the circuit courts averaged 743 civil cases concluded each in 1988, up from the 639 civil cases concluded per judge in 1987. The Nineteenth Circuit had the highest average among the 31 circuits with 1,127 civil cases concluded per judge while the 5th circuit had the lowest average with 416 cases concluded per judge.

Circuit Courts: Criminal Caseload Distribution, Cases Commenced

The number of cases purged under the 5-year rule jumped 171 percent, from 2,503 in 1987 to 6,792 in 1988. This jump accounted for over a third of the total increase in civil cases concluded. There were 2,596 more cases settled, non-suited, or dismissed than in 1987 while 1,966 more cases were purged under the 2-year rule than in the previous year. The number of civil cases concluded by a judge trial increased by 1,110 cases, a rise of almost 11 percent. There were 1,589 civil cases concluded by jury trial in 1988, an increase of almost 9 percent from 1987.

Due mainly to the increase in the number of cases concluded under the 2- and 5-year rules, the percentage of civil cases concluded within 12 months of filing dropped from 66 percent in 1987 to just 62 percent in 1988. However, if purged cases are excluded, the percentage of cases concluded within 12 months for both 1987 and 1988 was 72 percent. The Twenty-eighth Circuit disposed of 87.5 percent of the civil cases concluded (excluding purged cases) within 12 months of filing, the largest such percentage of any circuit. The Twenty-fourth Circuit concluded 83 percent within 12 months while the Thirty-first disposed of 81 percent within that time frame.

Criminal

Over 82,000 criminal cases were initiated in the circuit courts during 1988, an increase of almost 6 percent from the number commenced in 1987. The number of class 1 and 2 felonies jumped 12.5 percent, from 4,519 in 1987 to 5,083 in 1988. Other felony cases commenced rose by 7.3 percent while the number of misdemeanor cases initiated increased by 2.7 percent. Cases initiated by indictment, presentment, or information rose by 2,275 cases (5.1%) in 1988 while the number of reinstatements increased by 1,248 cases or 15 percent. The number of general district appeals increased 4 percent, from 22,844 in 1987 to 23,764 in 1988. Appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations courts rose by 215 cases (12%) while the number of cases commenced as a result of a case being remanded, verdict being set aside, or a mistrial dropped almost 14 percent (27 cases).

The Fourth Circuit reported 6,924 criminal cases commenced in 1988, the most of any circuit. The Twenty-eighth Circuit recorded the fewest number with 981 cases. The Nineteenth Circuit had the largest number of class 1 and 2 felonies commenced (688) and the largest number of misdemeanors initiated (2,959).

The 122 circuit court judges averaged 677 criminal cases commenced each in 1988, an increase from 1987 when the average was 638 cases per circuit court judge. The judges in urban circuits averaged 680 criminal cases each in 1988 while in rural circuits, the average was 673 criminal cases commenced per judge. The Third Circuit averaged 1,100 criminal cases commenced per judge, the highest average among the 31 circuits. The lowest per judge average was recorded in the Twenty-ninth Circuit where 409 cases were commenced per judge.

There were 78,909 criminal cases concluded in 1988, an 8.7 percent increase from the number concluded in 1987. The number of "other felony" cases concluded jumped 9.4 percent while the number of misdemeanors disposed of rose 8.5 percent. Class 1 and 2 felony cases concluded increased 2.3 percent from the number concluded in 1987.

Criminal cases concluded by a judge trial increased by 14 percent in 1988 while the number of criminal cases that were nolle prossed rose 13.6 percent. Cases terminated by a guilty plea before trial increased 7.7 percent (2,587 cases). The number of cases that ended in a jury trial rose by 2.2 percent from 1987.

The circuit court judges averaged 647 cases concluded each in 1988, 52 more cases each than in 1987. The Twenty-first Circuit averaged 936 criminal cases concluded per judge, the highest of any circuit, while the judges in the Third Circuit disposed of an average of 931 criminal cases each. The Twenty-ninth Circuit averaged the fewest number of criminal cases concluded each with 303 cases per judge.

Slightly less than one-fourth of the criminal cases concluded were disposed of within 30 days of initiation while just over 80 percent ended within 5 months. These figures are similar to those for 1987.

Almost 73,000 criminal cases were commenced in 1988 by indictment, presentment, information, waiver, warrant, or appeal from the district courts. The number of defendants represented by these charges totaled 45,581, an average of 1.6 charges per defendant. In felony cases, the average was 1.8 charges per defendant while in misdemeanor cases, each defendant averaged 1.35 charges.

Jury Trials

The number of juries impaneled increased 2.4 percent, from 4,211 in 1987 to 4,312 in 1988. In law cases, the number of juries impaneled rose from 1,676 in 19877 to 1,731 in 1988. Felony juries impaneled increased from 1,996 to 2,045 during the same period. Equity and misdemeanor juries impaneled both declined slightly. The Nineteenth Circuit reported the largest number of juries impaneled (504) while the Seventh Circuit recorded the fewest (34) of any of the 31 circuits.

Circuit court judges averaged 35 juries impaneled each in 1988. This included 15 civil juries, 17 felony juries, and 4 misdemeanor juries per judge. The Third Circuit and the Twenty-eighth Circuit each averaged 61 juries impaneled in 1988. The Twenty-eighth averaged 36 civil juries impaneled per judge, the most of any circuit while the Third Circuit recorded an average of 36 criminal juries impaneled, the highest such average. The Thirtieth Circuit averaged the most misdemeanor juries impaneled with 17.

THE DISTRICT COURTS

In Virginia, there are 77 general district courts, 69 juvenile and domestic relations district courts, and 57 combined district courts. Combined courts are served by a single clerk's office which performs the clerical functions of both a general district court and a juvenile and domestic relations district court. As of the end of 1988, 181 judges served the district courts supported by over 1,000 clerk's office staff members.

The general district courts hear criminal, traffic, and civil cases. These courts try misdemeanor cases and hold preliminary hearings in felony cases. The general district courts have exclusive jurisdiction in civil matters involving $1,000 or less and concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts in suits involving amounts up to $7,000.

The juvenile and domestic relations district courts hear cases involving delinquency, juvenile traffic violations, children in need of services, and children who have been abused or neglected. These courts also try cases involving adults accused of child abuse or of offenses against members of their own family, cases concerning support, visitation, and custody disputes, abandonment of children, foster care and entrustment agreements, court-ordered rehabilitation services, and court consent for certain medical treatments.

General District Courts

The general districts reported over 2.7 million new cases during 1988, an increase of 8.6 percent from the number filed in 1987. More than half (53%) of these cases were traffic cases, almost one-third were civil cases, while 16 percent were criminal cases. Over 2.8 million hearings were held during 1988, 9 percent more than were held in 1987. There were 2,778,920 cases concluded during 1988, an increase of 8.7 percent from the number concluded in 1987.

The general district courts of the Nineteenth District reported 288,723 new cases, the most of any district. Twenty-eight of the 32 districts reported caseload increases in 1988. The Twentieth District had the largest

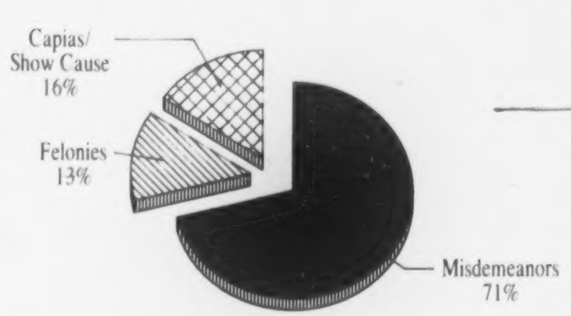
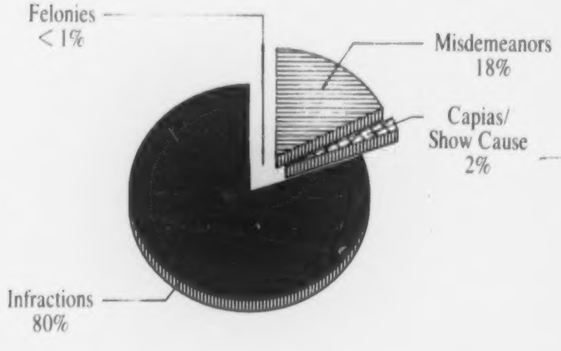
District Courts: Criminal Caseload Distribution, New Cases



The statewide average was 25,729 new cases per general district court judge. This was 1,129 more cases per judge than in 1987. The general district court judges also held an average of 26,259 hearings each in 1988, 1,233 more than in 1987. In urban districts, judges averaged 28,847 new cases and 29,945 hearings held per judge. Judges in rural districts had an average of 21,955 new cases and held an average of 21,798 hearings. Although an additional judgeship was created in the Second General District Court in 1988, that district still averaged more cases (37,688) than any of the other 32 districts.

District Courts: Traffic Caseload Distribution, New Cases



The number of new criminal cases increased from 410,765 in 1987 to 445,670 in 1988. Felony cases and the number of capias/show cause actions jumped 16.7 percent while misdemeanors increased by 5.5 percent. General district courts reported 868,736 hearings held in criminal cases, up 8.6 percent from the number held in 1987. The number of criminal cases concluded rose by 8.1 percent in 1988, totaling 446,980 cases concluded.

The judges in the general district courts averaged 4,136 new criminal cases in 1988, 177 more criminal cases each than in 1987. The urban average was 4,348 new criminal cases per judge while in rural districts, the judges averaged 3,879 cases each.

As in 1987, the Fourth District reported the most criminal cases (72,463) of any district. The judges in the Second District averaged 7,049 criminal cases in 1988, the highest average among the 32 districts. The Eighth District held the most hearings per judge in criminal cases with 13,273 hearings per judge.

New traffic cases increased 8.5 percent from 1,365,822 cases in 1987 to 1,482,327 cases in 1988. Over 96,000 more traffic infractions were initiated during 1988 than in 1987. The number of traffic misdemeanors increased by almost 15,000 cases (6%) while traffic felonies rose by 5 percent. Capias/show cause actions in traffic cases jumped from 22,770 in 1987 to 27,911 in 1988, an increase of 22.6 percent. The number of traffic cases concluded increased from 1.3 million in 1987 to over 1.4 million in 1988, a rise of 8.8 percent. Final judgments, which accounted for 64 percent of all traffic cases concluded, jumped almost 11 percent while prepayments and waivers rose by just 5.5 percent.

The Nineteenth District reported 223,006 new traffic cases and 167,397 hearings in traffic cases in 1988. These figures were the highest of any district and represented 15 percent of the state's new traffic cases and 12 percent of the state's traffic hearings.

General district court judges averaged 13,757 new traffic cases and 12,684 traffic hearings each in 1988. Judges in urban districts averaged 14,852 traffic cases each while in rural districts judges had an average of 12,431 traffic cases per judge. The Seventeenth District averaged 26,354 new traffic cases and 23,862 traffic hearings per judge, the most of any district.

The number of new civil cases increased by 8.9 percent in 1988, totaling 844,433 cases. The number of civil cases concluded rose over 10 percent from 1987 with 859,481 civil cases being concluded in 1988. Most (56%) of the civil cases concluded ended by settlement, dismissal, removal, or change of venue while default judgments accounted for another 39 percent of civil cases concluded.

Final judgments, which made up just 5 percent of all civil cases concluded, jumped 13 percent from 1987 to 1988.

The Thirteenth District again reported the highest number of new civil cases with 145,377 cases, just over 17 percent of the entire state's civil caseload. The Thirteenth District also held more hearing in civil cases than any other district.

The statewide averages were 7,836 civil cases and 5,513 civil hearings held per judge, 360 more cases and 209 more hearings held per judge than in 1987. Judges in urban districts averaged 9,646 new civil cases each while in rural districts, the judges had an average of 5,644 civil cases per judge. The Thirteenth District had the highest average among the 32 districts with 18,172 civil cases per judge.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts

In 1988, the number of new juvenile and domestic relations cases increased 14 percent to reach 285,295 cases. There was almost a 12 percent increase in the number of hearings held, from 456,784 in 1987 to 510,153 in 1988. The J&DR courts concluded 271,007 cases in 1988, 14 percent more than were concluded in 1987. Juvenile cases accounted for 63 percent of the J&DR caseload in 1988, one percentage point less than in 1987.

As was the case in 1987, the Nineteenth District reported the largest number of J&DR cases (24,438) while the Second District held the most J&DR hearings (20,894). Only one district (the Twenty-third) reported a decline in J&DR caseload in 1988. The Seventh District recorded the largest percentage increase in new cases with a jump of almost 40 percent from 1987.

The average caseload per J&DR judge increased from 3,415 in 1987 to 3,895 in 1988, a jump of 480 cases per judge. The urban average increased by over 500 cases per judge and stood at 4,328 cases per judge in 1988. In rural districts, judges averaged 3,476 cases each in 1988, 452 more cases per judge than in 1987. J&DR judges averaged almost 7,000 hearings held each in 1988, 217 more than in 1987.

Again in 1988, District 2-A had the highest average J&DR caseload of any of the 32 districts with 7,224 new cases per judge. District 2-A also held more hearings per judge (11,516) than any of the other districts.

Juvenile cases increased 12 percent from 159,266 cases in 1987 to 178,892 in 1988. The number of custody/visitation cases (which accounted for almost one-third of the juvenile caseload) jumped 14 percent from 50,084 in 1987 to 57,224 in 1988. Juvenile traffic cases,

* Implementation of the Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System

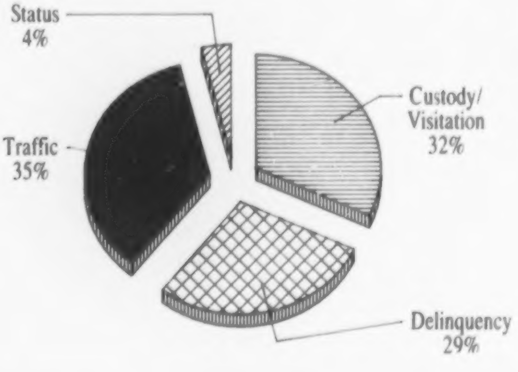
 Revision of Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System which made up 35 percent of all juvenile cases, increased by 11.6 percent (6,566 cases) over 1987 to reach 63,322 cases. Delinquency cases increased by over 5,000 cases in 1988, representing a rise of 11.4 percent. Status offenses, which made up just 4 percent of all juvenile cases, increased by 10.2 percent.

The Nineteenth District reported 19,555 juvenile cases in 1988, the most of any district. The Second District had the second highest number of new juvenile cases with 13,899. Twenty-nine of the 32 districts showed increases in the number of new juvenile cases in 1988. The Twentieth District experienced the largest percent increase (32.6%) while the Twenty-third had the largest percent decrease (-7.6%).

The judges in the J&DR courts averaged 2,442 juvenile cases and 4,253 juvenile hearings held each in 1988. This was 268 more cases and 377 more hearings held per judge than in 1987. Judges in urban districts averaged 2,829 new juvenile cases each in 1988 (up from 2,559 juvenile cases per judge in 1987) while those in rural districts averaged 2,069 new juvenile cases per judge (up from 1,802 in 1987). District 2a again had the highest average juvenile caseload with 3,932 cases per judge and averaged more hearings held per judge with 6,416 than any of the other districts.

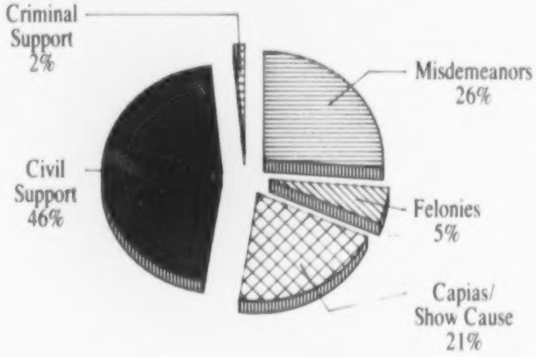
Domestic relations cases jumped by 17 percent, from 90,880 in 1987 to 106,403 in 1988. This was due in large part to a 10,361 case increase in civil support matters. The number of capias/show cause actions increased 22 percent from 18,158 in 1987 to 22,195 in 1988 while the number of misdemeanors rose 7.2 percent. Criminal support cases dropped almost 20 percent while felonies decreased from 6,098 in 1987 to 5,740 in 1988.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts:
Juvenile Caseload Distribution, New Cases



Civil support cases accounted for 46 percent of the domestic relations caseload in 1988, up from 42.5 percent in 1987. Misdemeanors made up another 26 percent of the caseload while capias/show cause actions accounted for 21 percent.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts:
Domestic Relations Caseload Distribution, New Cases



Domestic relations cases increased in 30 of the 32 districts in 1988. The Fourteenth District recorded the largest percentage increase with a jump of 53.2 percent. The Twenty-third District and the Twenty-eighth District both experienced declines in domestic relations cases of 4.1 percent.

J&DR judges averaged 1,453 new domestic relations cases each in 1988, an increase of 212 from the statewide average in 1987. In urban districts, judges averaged 1,500 new domestic relations cases per judge (up from 1,260 in 1987) while judges in rural districts had an average of 1,407 cases each (up from 1,222 in 1987).

As in 1987, the Second District reported the largest number of domestic relations cases (6,995) and the most domestic relations hearings (12,326) of any of the 32 districts. District 2a had the highest average number of domestic relations cases per judge (with 12,326) and the most domestic relations hearings held per judge (with 5,100).

MAGISTRATES

Magistrates provide an independent, unbiased review of complaints brought to the office by police officers, sheriffs, deputies, and citizens. They serve as a buffer between law enforcement and society and are specially trained to perform such duties as issuing search warrants, subpoenas, arrest warrants, summonses, and civil warrants, and conducting bond hearings. Magistrates may also accept prepayment for traffic infractions and minor (class 4) misdemeanors.

Each judicial district has one chief magistrate and a number of authorized magistrates. As of the end of 1988, the Commonwealth was served by 449 magistrates including 32 chief magistrates. In some areas, full-time magistrates work on a shift basis to maintain an office twenty-four hours a day. In other areas, magistrates work on an "on call" basis to provide magistrate services as needed. Magistrates are appointed by the chief judge of the circuit court for a term of four years. Each magistrate, within the first six months of his term, must undergo training and a certification process administered locally and through the Supreme Court.

In 1988, magistrates in Virginia reported 1,186,752 duty hours, providing service to the public during 59,337 of these hours. Thus, the number of duty hours declined from 1987 while the number of activity hours increased. There were 1,126,967 requests for process received by magistrates in 1988, over 48,000 more than were received in 1987. Magistrates issued 864,827 processes, about 3 percent more than were issued in 1987.

Magistrates issued 462,891 processes (arrest warrants, summonses etc.) after probable cause hearings, about 87 for every 100 requests. This was a slight decline from 1987 when over 88 percent of probable cause hearings resulted in a process being issued. The number of bonds issued increased by almost 4 percent, from 254,441 in 1987 to 264,085 in 1988. Bonds were issued in about 59 percent of bond hearings held. Magistrates issued 39,163 civil warrants, almost a 28 percent drop from the number issued in 1987. There was an increase in the number of other processes issued of almost 16 percent, from 85,198 in 1987 to 98,688 issued in 1988.

The Nineteenth District reported the most processes issued (69,993) as well the highest number of transactions (95,812). The Nineteenth recorded more probable cause processes and bonds issued than any other district. The Fourteenth District issued the largest number of other processes (24,068) while the Twenty-second District issued the most civil warrants (9,740). In 22 of the 32 districts, the number of processes issued increased form 1987 to 1988. The Twelfth District reported the largest percentage increase with a 30.3 percent jump while the Fourth District recorded the largest percentage decrease with a drop of 25.4 percent.

Statewide, processes were issued at an average of 1,930 processes for every authorized magistrate position in 1988. Magistrates issued processes at the rate of 1.42 per FTE hour. The Fourteenth District averaged 5,230 processes per magistrate and 3.03 processes per FTE hour, the highest averages of any of the 32 districts.

MEDICAL MALPRACTICE REVIEW PANELS

A system of Medical Malpractice Review Panels was instituted in late 1976. Since this time, over 1500 panels have been requested. During calendar year 1988, 178 panels were assigned, an increase of 53 (42.4%) over the previous year. Since the inception of the Medical Review System, an average of 130 panels per year has been processed.

From the first panel assignment on December 6, 1976 through December 31, 1988, 1561 panels have been requested through the Supreme Court. Of this total, 672 have been concluded, 110 dismissed, 537 withdrawn and 242 remain in a pending or to-be-heard status as of the end of 1988.

The 1977 General Assembly amended the original legislation setting up the Medical Malpractice Review Panel System and provided the following opinions which a panel might determine pursuant to Section 8.01-581.7 of the Code of Virginia.

1. Evidence does not support a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care;
2. Evidence supports a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care and that such failure is a proximate cause in the alleged damages;
3. Evidence supports a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care and that such failure is not a proximate cause in the alleged damages; or
4. Evidence indicates that there is a material issue of fact, not requiring an expert opinion, bearing on liability for consideration by a court or jury (i.e., the case contains a material issue of fact that a court or jury can resolve without an expert opinion).

Of the 803 decisions* which had been rendered as of December 31, 988, 596 (74%) favored the health care provider, 123 (15%) favored the claimant, and the remaining 84 (10%) fell within the last two opinion categories of Section 8.01-581.7.

During 1988, Northern Virginia again led as the section of the state where the greatest number of medical malpractice claims were filed. Northern Virginia was followed by the Tidewater area and the Richmond area. Hospitals, dentists, general surgeons and OB-GYN physicians are the groups accounting for the largest number of panel requests.

SUPREME COURT DESIGNATIONS

During 1988, the Assistant Executive Secretary's office processed 623 designations for issuance through the Supreme Court of Virginia. This number is 49 greater (or 8.5%) than the 574 processed in 1987. Of the 623 designations issued, 562 (90%) were for circuit court cases, and 61 (10%) were for district court cases.

The 562 circuit court designations in 1988 represented an almost 12 percent increase over the number issued in 1987. This increase was primarily reflected in the number of requests for assistance (363 versus 314) and the number of disqualification cases (155 versus 138) in single-judge cases. In the three-judge court categories, certificate of public need cases led with 16 followed by six election recount panels.

In 1988 the largest designation categories continued to be in the general assistance and disqualification categories, and this was true both at the circuit and district court levels. Of the total 518 single judge designations issued to circuit courts, 363 (or 70 percent) were for general assistance and 155 (30 percent) fell into the disqualification category. Both active and retired judges volunteered their assistance throughout the state.

For the last four years, the district courts have used lists prepared by the Assistant Executive Secretary's office to call retired, recalled judges and substitute judges for service. This decentralization has proved effective, but on occasions it is still necessary for the Supreme Court to make a judicial assignment. In 1988, 61 requests were made to the Supreme Court for judicial assignment within the district court system. This was a slight decrease (61 versus 70) since 1987 and was reflected in both the assistance and disqualification categories.

The use of designated judges is a critical factor in the judiciary's continuing battle to handle its increasing caseload. Retired, recalled judges both at the circuit and district court level significantly impact the system and help to avoid adding more judges. For the first time in its brief history, the Court of Appeals began using retired, recalled circuit judges on a limited basis during 1988.

First Judicial Circuit and District

The First Judicial Circuit serves the City of Chesapeake. The 1980 Census recorded 114,486 residents in the city, including 36,559 juveniles. According to Department of Planning and Budget projections, the total population will increase by 24.9 percent to 143,000 in 1990. The juvenile population is projected to increase 9.9 percent to 40,187.

William L. Forbes and Russell I. Townsend, Jr. served the First Circuit court in 1988. Stephen L. Comfort and Robert R. Carter served the general district courts, and E. P. Grissom and James A. Leftwich served the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The first district court judges used 66.4 days for substitute and retired recalled judges in 1988. This is an average of 16.6 days per judge.

Three thousand eight hundred fourteen (3,814) cases were commenced in the First Circuit court during 1988. This represents a 6.9 percent increase over the number commenced in 1987. Concluded cases increased 18.1 percent in 1988, to 3,492. Civil cases commenced increased 7.6 percent, to 2,228. This number ranks seventeenth in the state. Criminal cases increased 5.9 percent, from 1,498 in 1987 to 1,586 in 1988. Law cases accounted for 22 percent of cases in the first circuit; equity, 36 percent of cases; felony 28 percent of cases; and misdemeanor, 14 percent. This distribution parallels the state distribution. The judges in the First Circuit averaged 1,589 cases each. This ranks the First Circuit seventh in the state in the 1988 caseload per judge. The state-wide average caseload was 1,452 per judge; the urban average caseload was 1,527 cases per judge. The First Circuit ranked seventeenth in the state in total number of both civil and criminal cases. However, the First Circuit ranked fourth in civil caseload, with an average of 928 cases per judge, and seventeenth in criminal caseload, with an average of 661 cases per judge. This compares with a state average caseload of 774 civil and 677 criminal cases per judge. Statewide, 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases ended by a judge trial, 1.8 percent by a trial by jury. Twenty-five percent of criminal cases concluded in the state were judge trials, 5 percent were jury trials. Sixty-two percent of the civil cases commenced in the state were concluded within 12 months. Statewide, 80.5 percent of criminal cases commenced in 1988 were concluded within 5 months. In the First Circuit, 3.8 percent of concluded civil cases were judge trials, 2.6 percent were jury trials. 26.3 percent of criminal cases concluded in the First Circuit were ended by judge trial, 4.1 percent by jury. In the First Circuit, 49.5 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months; 82.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within 5 months. Eighty juries were impaneled in the First Circuit in 1988, a 14.9 percent decrease from 1987. One thousand nine hundred ninety-eight cases per judge were pending at the end of 1988. This average ranks third in the state, where the average pending caseload per judge was 1,393 cases.

The number of new cases in the general district court was up 13.7 percent over 1987, to 65,119 cases. Criminal cases increased 4.5 percent, to 9,504; traffic cases increased 5 percent to 29,900, and civil cases increased 30.6 percent in 1988, to 25,715. In 1987, there were 19,693 new civil cases in general district court. The distribution of new cases in general district court was: 16 percent criminal, 50 percent traffic, and 34 percent civil. This is close to the statewide distribution of 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. Hearings increased 3.3 percent, from 67,215 in 1987 to 69,466 inn 1988. The district ranked fifth in the state in terms of total caseload per judge in general district court, with 32,560 cases per judge. The criminal caseload of 4,752 cases per judge ranked tenth in the state, the average traffic caseload of 14,950 cases per judge ranked tenth, and the average civil caseload of 12,858 ranked fifth. These caseloads compare with statewide averages of: 4,136 criminal, 13,757 traffic, and 7,836 civil.

There were 7,944 new cases filed in the juvenile and domestic relations court in Chesapeake during 1988. This number represents an increase of 4.7 percent from 1987. Juvenile cases, up 4.6 percent to 4,700, accounted for 59 percent of the cases in juvenile and domestic relations court. Domestic relations cases increased 4.9 percent to 3,244. This represented 41 percent of the caseload. Chesapeake ranked fifth in the state in the number of juvenile and domestic relations hearings with 17,831. Judges in Chesapeake's juvenile and domestic relations courts heard an average of 3,972 new cases. This is slightly higher than the state average of 3,895, but below the urban average of 4,328. In juvenile cases, the First, with a per judge average of 2,350, was below both the statewide average of 2,442 and the urban average of 2,829. However, the domestic relations caseload of 1,622 was higher than both the state average, 1,453, and the urban average, 1,500.

Magistrates in the First District recorded 15,140 activity hours and 33,765 transactions. These transactions resulted in 27,671 processes issued: 9,742 after probable cause hearings, 5,495 bonds, 11,264 civil warrants, and 1,170 other processes. Processes were issued in 87.5 percent of probable cause hearings, and 56.2 percent of bond hearings.

Second Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Virginia Beach and the counties of Accomack and Northampton are served by the Second Judicial Circuit. According to the 1980 Census, there were 262,199 residents in this area. By 1990, the Office of Planning and Budget projects that the population will increase by 38.5 percent, to 363,600, including 94,828 juveniles.

There are nine authorized judgeships in the Second Circuit. In 1988, these were filled by: N. Wescott Jacob, Alan E. Rosenblatt, Austin E. Owen, Philip L. Russo, H. Calvin Spain, Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Edward W. Hanson, Jr. and John K. Moore. Thomas S. Shadrick will join the circuit bench on July 1, 1989, filling the judgeship created by the 1989 General Assembly. John B. Preston, R. Stanley Hudgins, Donald H. Rhodes, Robert L. Simpson, Jr., and Virginia L. Cochran served the Second District Court. Judge Cochran joined the bench on July 1, 1988. Judge Rhodes resigned from the bench on April 30, 1989. J. Dale Bimson will fill the newly created judgeship on the Second District bench on July 1, 1989. In 1988, Fred P. Aucamp, Jerome B. Friedman, J. Davis Reed, and Ronald H. Marks served the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The judges of the Second District used 237 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average per judge was 26.3 days, slightly higher than the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

There was a 14.1 percent increase in the number of commenced cases in 1988. In 1987, 11,606 cases were commenced; in 1988, 7,847 commenced civil cases and 5,392 commenced criminal cases brought the total number of commenced cases to 13,239. The number of civil cases rose 16.8 percent, while the number of criminal cases rose 10.3 percent. The caseload distribution was: 26 percent law, 33 percent equity, 22 percent felony, and 19 percent misdemeanor. The proportions of equity and felony cases differed from the statewide distributions of 29, percent and 30 percent, respectively. The average caseload per judge (1,655) ranked second amount the 31 circuits in the state, and was higher than both the statewide average of 1,452 cases per judge, and the urban average of 1,527 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 981 cases per judge ranked third in the state while the average criminal caseload of 674 cases per judge ranked twelfth. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 774 cases per judge, and the average criminal caseload was 677 cases per judge. The average urban civil caseload was 847 cases per judge, almost 150 cases fewer than the Second Circuit average civil caseload. About 12,000 cases were concluded in the Second Circuit, 14.7 percent increase over 1987. Of the 6,599 civil cases concluded, 11.3 percent were terminated by a judge trial, while 1.3 percent were concluded by jury. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, and 1.8 percent were concluded by jury trial. Sixty-six percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. This was slightly higher than the state total of 62 percent. Of the 5,042 criminal cases that were concluded in the Second Circuit, 13.3 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 2.4 percent were terminated by a jury trial, and 81 percent ended within five months. Statewide, 25 percent of criminal cases were concluded by a judge trial, five percent by jury trial, and 79.5 percent of concluded criminal cases reached termination within five months of filing. The number of juries impaneled rose 12.8 percent, from 179 in 1987 to 202 in 1988.

In the general district court, 188,341 new cases were filed. This represents a 13.5 percent increase over 1987, when 165,892 new cases were filed. The increase in the number of new cases was almost evenly spread across the caseload. The number of new criminal cases rose 13.4 percent, to 35,243. The number of new traffic cases rose 13.6 percent, to 102,376. The number of new civil cases rose 13.6 percent, to 50,722. Criminal cases made up 19 percent of the caseload, traffic cases made up 54 percent of the caseload, and 27 percent of the caseload was new civil cases. Statewide, the distribution was very similar: 16 percent criminal cases, 53 percent traffic cases, and 30 percent civil cases. The total average caseload per judge, and the average criminal caseload per judge in the Second District ranked first among districts in the state. The total average caseload of 37,668 cases per judge was well above the state average of 25,729 cases per judge, and the urban average of 28,847 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 7,049 cases per judge was also significantly higher than both the state (4,136 cases per judge) and urban (4,348 cases per judge) averages. The average traffic caseload of 20,475 cases per judge ranked fourth in the state, and was higher than the state average of 13,757 cases per judge and the urban average of 14,852 cases per judge. The civil caseload ranked seventh among state districts. At 10,144 cases per judge,it also surpassed the state and urban averages of 7,836 and 9,646 cases per judge, respectively. Hearings in the Second District increased 15.1 percent over 1987, to 187,106. The Second District ranked third among state districts in the average hearing caseload per judge in 1988, with 37,421 hearings per judge.

New cases in the juvenile and domestic relations court rose 11.4 percent, to 20,894 new cases filed in 1988. Two-thirds of these cases (67 percent) were juvenile cases. The number of new juvenile cases filed rose 11.7 percent, from 12,441 in 1987 to 13,899 in 1988. The nearly 7,000 new domestic relations cases represented a 10.8 percent increase over 1987. The total average caseload and the average juvenile caseload in the Second District ranked third in the state, at 5,224 total cases per judge, and 3,475 juvenile cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload was more than 1,000 cases higher than the state average (2,442 cases per judge), and almost 650 cases higher than the urban average (2,829 cases per judge). The average domestic relations caseload ranked tenth, although at 1,749 cases per judge, it was still higher than the state and urban averages (1,453 cases per judge, and 1,500 cases per judge, respectively).

The 21 magistrates of the Second District recorded 29,848 activity hours, 68,320 transactions, and 54,326 processes issued. The Second District ranked second in the state in the number of processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 29,231 processes issued, 13,465 bonds were issued, nine civil warrants were issued, and 11,621 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings in the Second District had a 93.8 percent issuance rate, significantly higher than the state issuance rate of 87.2 percent. However, the issuance rate of bond hearings in the Second District (53.4 percent), fell below the state rate of 61.8 percent.

Judicial District Two-A

The counties of Accomack and Northampton are served by District Two-A. Judge Wescott B. Northam serves both the general district courts and the juvenile and domestic relations courts in the district. Judge Northam used 30.2 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges.

New cases in District Two-A dropped slightly (0.7 percent), from 23,661 in 1987 to 23,488 in 1988. The average caseload of 31,317 cases was the seventh highest in the state, well above the statewide average caseload per judge of 25,729 and the rural average caseload per judge of 21,955. The number criminal cases filed increased sharply (23.1 percent), to 3,243. The average criminal caseload ranked thirteenth among state districts, and was higher than the average rural caseload of 3,879, and the state average caseload of 4,136. Criminal cases made up 14 percent of the total caseload. New civil cases also increased in District Two-A: up 5.4 percent to 9,707. The average civil caseload ranked third in the state, and also surpassed the state and rural average caseloads of 7,836 and 5,644, respectively. Civil cases made up 41 percent of the total general district caseload. The number of new traffic cases, which made up 45 percent of the new caseload, decreased 11 percent, to 10,538. The average traffic caseload, which ranked twentieth in the state, fell below the state average of 13,757 cases per judge, and the rural average of 12,431. Hearings increased by six percent, to 17,748.

In juvenile and domestic relations courts, the number of new cases filed rose slightly (1.2 percent), to 1,806. The resulting average caseload of 7,224 cases was the highest in the state, more than double the rural average of 3,476 cases per judge, and nearly double the state average of 3,895 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 3,932 also ranked first in the state, although the number of new juvenile cases in the District fell 3.3 percent. The average juvenile caseload far surpasses the rural average juvenile caseload of 2,069 cases per judge and the state average juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge. The number of new domestic relations cases jumped 7.2 percent, to 832. These new cases contributed to District Two-A taking the first ranking in the domestic relations caseload as well. The domestic relations caseload was 3,292, again more than double the rural average of 1,407 cases per judge and the domestic relations caseload as well. The domestic relations caseload was 3,292, again more thastate average of 1,453 cases per judge. Statewide, juvenile cases made up nearly two-thirds (63 percent) of the juvenile and domestic relations caseload, but in District Two-A, the distribution was more evenly divided, with 54 percent of all new cases being juveniles cases, and 46 percent being domestic relations cases.

Six magistrates in District Two-A recorded 6,476 activity hours, 6,448 transactions, and 5,032 processes issued. One civil warrant was issued, 496 miscellaneous processes were issued, 1,213 bonds were issued, and probable cause hearing resulted in an additional 3,322 processes issued. Probable cause hearings had an issuance rate of 89 percent, slightly higher than the state total of 87.5 percent. The issuance rate in bond hearings was 55.7 percent, below the state total of 61.8 percent.

Third Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Portsmouth is served by the Third Judicial Circuit. There were 104,577 residents in Portsmouth in 1980, according to that year's census. According to the 1980 Census, 30,024 residents of Portsmouth were juveniles. By 1990, the population is projected to increase by 9.8 percent to 114,800. The juvenile population is expected to decrease 12.1 percent to 26,382.

Dennis F. McMurran, William H. Oast, Jr., and L. Cleaves Manning served the circuit court in Portsmouth. Archie Elliott, Jr., Stanley Morris, Jr., and James A. Cales, Jr. served the general district court, while Cecil W. Johnson and Von L. Piersall presided over the juvenile and domestic court. The general district court judges used 26.8 days for substitute and recalled retired judges an average of 5.4 days per judge. As in 1987, the Third had the lowest average in the state in terms of substitute days per judge. The state average was 25.3 days per judge.

The 5,474 commenced cases in the circuit court reflected a 12.6 percent increase over 1987. Concluded cases increased greatly (46.6 percent), to 6,018, due largely to a dramatic increase in civil cases purged under the five year rule. Civil cases accounted for 2,173 of the new cases, criminal cases made up the remaining 3,301. These cases increased 13.9 and 11.7 percent, respectively. The caseload distribution was 21 percent law, 19 percent equity, 33 percent felony, and 28 percent misdemeanor. The proportions of felony and law cases were close to the state distribution of 30 percent and 25 percent, respectively. However, the proportion of equity cases was 10 points below the state distribution (29 percent), and the proportion of misdemeanor cases was 12 points higher than the state distribution of 16 percent. The Third ranked first in the state in average cases per judge, with a circuit average of 1,825. The statewide average was 1,452 cases per judge. The urban average was 1,527. The civil caseload average of 724 cases per judge was below the state average of 774, and ranked sixteenth in the state. The average criminal caseload ranked first in the state, at 1,100 cases per judge, compared to a statewide average of 677, and an urban average of 680 cases per judge. Four percent of the 3,224 concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, while 1.8 percent ended in a jury trial. Only 25.4 percent of concluded civil cases ended within 12 months, less than half the state average of 62 percent. Of the 2,794 criminal cases concluded in 1988, 21.9 percent were terminated by judge trial, 11 percent by jury. The percentage of criminal cases ending within 5 months (95.1 percent) was higher than the state average of 79.5 percent. One hundred eighty-three juries were impaneled, a decline of 21.5 percent from 1987.

New cases in the general district court decreased 3.2 percent from 1987, to 59,323. The distribution of these cases was 20 percent criminal, 30 percent traffic, and 50 percent civil. The distribution of traffic and civil cases was significantly different from the state distribution of 53 percent traffic and 30 percent civil. There were 77,620 hearings held in 1988, a 3.2 percent increase from 1987. The average criminal caseload was 3,887, which ranked eighteenth in the state and was 249 cases below the state average. The traffic caseload was 5,896, less than half the state average of 13,757. The average civil caseload in the Third district, however, was 9,991 cases per judge, more than 2,000 cases higher than the state average of 7,836, and ranking ninth in the state.

There were 7,537 new cases recorded in the juvenile and domestic relations court. Forty-six percent of these were juvenile cases, 54 percent were domestic relations cases. These new cases represented a 21.3 percent increase in total new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court, an 8.8 percent increase in new juvenile cases, and a 34.5 percent increase in domestic relations cases, over 1987. The juvenile caseload of 1,737 was below the state average of 2,442. The domestic caseload ranked fifth in the state, and at 2,032, was well above both the state average caseload of 1,453 and the urban average of 1,500 cases per judge.

The magistrates of the Third recorded 10,323 activity hours and issued 18,199 processes. More than half of these processes, 10,289, were issued after probable cause hearings; 6,149 were issued for bonds; four for civil warrants; and 1,757 for other processes. There was an 88.3 percent issuance rate after probable cause hearings, a 61 percent issuance rate after bond hearings. The number of transactions increased 5.4 percent, from 22,319 in 1987 to 23,532 in 1988. However, the number of processes issued rose just 1.6 percent during that same time period.

Fourth Judicial Circuit and District

The Fourth Judicial Circuit serves the city of Norfolk. According to the 1980 Census, the population was 266,876 residents, of which 65,613 were juveniles. The total population is expected to increase to 274,700 by 1990. The juvenile population, however, is expected to decrease by 10.4 percent, to 58,783, by 1990.

Nine judges served the circuit court in 1988: John E. Clarkson, Thomas R. McNamara, Jerome James, Robert W. Stewart, Alfred E. Whitehurst, John W. Winston, Leonard B. Sachs, Lydia C. Taylor, and John C. Morrison, Jr. Judge William Moultrie Guerry retired from the bench on the first of April, 1988. Judges Taylor and Morrison joined the bench on April 1, 1988, having been elected from the district courts. They were replaced on the district court by Luther C. Edmonds and Charles E. Poston, on May 1, 1988 and April 1, 1988, respectively. Judge Edmonds joined Charles R. Cloud, Lawrence C. Lawless, Fred E. Martin, Jr., Joseph H. Campbell, and Reid M. Spencer, on the general district court bench. Charles E. Poston was elected to the juvenile and domestic relations court, where he served with James H. Flippen, Jr., and Lester V. Moore. The Fourth district judges used 414 days for substitute and recalled, retired judges. They used an average of 46 days per judge, the highest average in the state.

There was an 8.9 percent increase in cases commenced in circuit court between 1987 (12,323 cases commenced) and 1988 (13,425 cases commenced). Commenced cases were split almost evenly between civil (6,501 cases, 48 percent of total) and criminal (6,924, 52 percent of total). Civil cases increased 18.5 percent over 1987, while criminal cases increased only 1.3 percent. The distribution of commenced cases was: 31 percent law, 17 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 17 percent misdemeanor. Law and felony cases made up a greater proportion of the total cases in the Fourth than in the state as a whole. The state case distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload was 1,492 cases per judge, slightly higher than the state average of 1,452, but lower than the urban average of 1,527. The average civil caseload was 722, which ranked seventeenth in the state and was lower than both the state and urban averages. The average criminal caseload ranked seventh in the state, and, at 769 cases per judge, was higher than both the state and urban averages (677 and 680, respectively). The number of concluded cases increased 5.1 percent, from 11,460 in 1987 to 12,043 in 1988. Of the cases concluded, 5,371 were civil cases. Of these, 13.3 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 1.5. percent by jury trial. Slightly more than half (57 percent) of concluded civil cases were ended within 12 months of filing. Of the 6,672 criminal cases concluded in 1988, 8.6 percent were ended by judge trial, 1.7 by jury. The proportion of criminal cases concluded within 5 months was 73.5 percent. One-hundred-ninety juries were impaneled in 1988. This represents an 8.7 percent decline from 1987.

In the general district court, 205,629 new cases were filed; 4.9 percent fewer than in 1987. The cases were distributed: 18 percent criminal, 39 percent traffic and 42 percent civil. This compares to a state distribution of 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. The Fourth ranked first in the state in the number of hearings. There were 266,549 hearings in 1988, up 2.5 percent from 1987. The average criminal caseload of 6,217 ranked second in the state, and was about 2,000 higher than both the state average of 4,136 and the urban averge of 4,348. The average civil caseload also ranked second in the state, at 14,679, compared to 7,836 (state average) and 9,646 (urban average). The average traffic caseload of 13,376 ranked fourteenth in the state and was lower than the state (13,757) and urban (14,852) average caseloads.

In the juvenile and domestic relations court, there were 14,273 new cases in 1988. This represents a 23.2 percent increase over 1987. Juvenile cases made up the bulk of these new cases with 8,769. The remaining 5,504 new cases were domestic relations cases. The Fourth ranked seventh in the state in both juvenile and domestic relations average caseloads per judge. The average juvenile caseload was 2,923, while the average domestic relations caseload was 1,835 cases per judge. These compare with state average caseloads of 2,442 and 1,453, respectively, and urban average caseloads of 2,829 and 1,500 cases per judge.

There were 22,753 activity hours recorded by the thirteen magistrates of the Fourth. These magistrates issued 37,553 processes: 23,939 after probable cause hearings, 12,314 for bonds, and 1,300 for other processes. Of the probable cause hearings held, 79.5 percent resulted in a process issued. Among bond hearings, the issuance rate was 40.1 percent.

Fifth Judicial Circuit and District

The cities of Suffolk and Franklin and the counties of Isle of Wight and Southampton make up the Fifth Judicial Circuit. In 1980, the Census recorded 95,263 residents in this area, including 27,750 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase 11.7 percent, to 106,400. However, this increase is expected in Suffolk, Franklin and Isle of Wight only. A 1.8 percent decrease in population is projected for Southampton county. The total juvenile population across the area is expected to decrease 10.2 percent, to 24,908 by 1990.

The judges who served the Fifth Circuit in 1988 were: E. Everett Bagnell, James C. Godwin, and Westbrook J. Parker. Robert B. Edwards and William Wellington Jones served the general district courts, and William R. Moore, Jr., and R. D. Hunter, III, served the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Fifth District used 72.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 18.1 days per judge. This fell more than seven days below the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases rose 13.3 percent in the Fifth Circuit, from 3,433 in 1987 to 3,891 in 1988. The number of commenced civil cases fell slightly, from 1,389 to 1,369 in 1988. Locally, the City of Suffolk experienced a 5.1 percent drop in civil cases. The number of criminal cases commenced in the Fifth Circuit in 1988 rose 23.4 percent, to 2,522. This jump in criminal cases evidenced itself in the large proportion of the total caseload taken by felony cases. Felony cases were 40 percent of the caseload in the Fifth Circuit, compared to only 30 percent statewide. Misdemeanors also accounted for more than the average share of the caseload.: 24 percent in the Fifth Circuit, but only 16 percent statewide. Sixteen percent of commenced cases in the Fifth were law cases, 19 percent were equity cases. Statewide, the distributions were 25 percent and 29 percent, respectively. The large jump in the number of criminal cases also showed itself in the average caseloads. While the average total circuit caseload 1,497 cases per judge ranked eleventh among the state circuits, and the average civil caseload of 527 cases per judge ranked thirtieth, the average criminal caseload of 970 cases per judge in the Fifth Circuit was the second highest in the state. The statewide average criminal caseload was only 677 cases per judge; the rural average criminal caseload was only 673 cases per judge. The Fifth's average civil caseload fell well below the rural average of 676 cases per judge and the state average of 774 cases per judge. The total average caseload in the Fifth was only slightly higher than the state average of 1,452 cases per judge. The number of cases concluded in the Fifth rose only 2.2 percent, to 2,522 cases in 1988. Nine percent of the 1,082 civil cases that were concluded were terminated by a judge trial. Jury trials concluded 2.4 percent of civil cases. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded by judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury trial. About 75 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Across the state, only 62 percent of civil cases were concluded in that time frame. Four percent of concluded criminal cases were ended by jury trial, compared to five percent statewide. Trials by judges concluded 29.2 percent of criminal cases in the Fifth Circuit. Statewide, judges concluded 25 percent of criminal cases. The Fifth Circuit just about matched the state total in the number of criminal cases concluded within 5 months. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded in that time period; in the Fifth Circuit, 79.6 percent were concluded in five months. Eighty-two juries were impaneled in 1988, up 43.9 percent from 1987.

New cases filed in the general district courts rose 15.6 percent, to 54,474 in 1988. Sixteen percent of these cases were criminal, 55 percent were traffic cases, and 29 percent were civil cases. Across the state, the distribution of new cases in the general district courts was nearly identical. Criminal cases rose 12.3 percent, to 8,553 cases in the district. However, Southampton County recorded a 1.1 percent decline in the number of criminal cases. Traffic cases increased 11.2 percent in the district. While all localities in the district reported an increase in traffic cases, it is noteworthy that Southampton County recorded 24.4 percent of the total number of traffic cases. Southampton County recorded only 18.9 percent of all cases in general district court. The number of civil cases commenced in the Fifth rose 27 percent. In Isle of Wight County, the number of civil cases more than doubled, from 1,865 in 1987 to 3,810 in 1988. The number of hearings in the Fifth rose 13.3 percent, to 56,690 in 1988. Generally, the caseloads of the Fifth district ranked in the middle third of the caseloads across the state, and were only slightly higher than the state average caseloads. The total average caseload in the Fifth was 27,237 cases per judge; statewide, the average was 25,729 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 4,277 cases per judge was less than 250 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 7,928 cases per judge was less than 100 cases higher than the state civil average of 7,836. However, the average traffic caseload in the Fifth District ranked ninth in the state, and, at 15,033 cases per judge, was almost ten percent higher than the state average traffic caseload of 13,757 cases per judge.

In 1988, 6,425 new cases were filed in juvenile and domestic relations courts in the Fifth District. This represented a 23.9 percent increase over 1987. Most of this increase came among domestic relations cases, which made up 44 percent of the caseload, and increased 32.4 percent, to 3,587 cases in 1988. While Isle of Wight County reported a 46.1 percent increase in domestic relations cases, Southampton County reported a 37 percent increase in domestic relations cases, and the City of Suffolk reported a 35.2 percent increase in domestic relations cases. Franklin city actual experienced a 1.9 percent decline in the number of domestic relations cases. Juvenile cases rose only 14.6 percent, to 2,838 cases. Southampton County experienced a 13 percent drop in juvenile cases. While the total juvenile and domestic relations average caseload of 3,213 cases per judge ranked twenty-third, and the juvenile caseload of 1,419 cases per judge was the lowest in the state, the average domestic relations caseload in the Fifth District was the eighth highest in the state. At 1,794 cases per judge, the average domestic relations caseload in the Fifth District (a rural district) not only surpassed the rural relations caseload of 1,407 cases per judge, and the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,453 cases per judge, it surpassed the average domestic relations caseload among urban districts (1,500 cases per judge).

In 14,617 recorded activity hours, the ten magistrates of the Fifth District completed 18,190 transactions, resulting in 15,137 processes issued. Probable cause hearings, which had an issuance rate of 97.2 percent (well above the state issuance rate of 87.2 percent), resulted in 8,828 of those processes; bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 66.4 percent (compared to 61.8 percent issuance statewide), resulted in 5,492 processes issued. Fourteen civil warrants were issued; 803 other processes were issued.

Sixth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry and Sussex as well as the cities of Emporia and Hopewell comprise the Sixth Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded a population in this area of 97,425 residents, including 29,085 juveniles. The Department of Planning and Budget predicts that, by 1990, the total population will increase 5.6 percent to 102,900, while the juvenile population will decrease 12.4 percent to 25,484.

William Park Lemmond, Jr., and Robert G. O'Hara, Jr., served the Sixth Circuit Court bench in 1988. John C. Baker and James A. Luke served the general district bench. Kenneth W. Nye will fill the new judgeship position. The juvenile and domestic relations bench was served by Samuel E. Campbell and C. A. Perkinson. The judges of the Sixth District used 51.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 13 days per judge was nearly half the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases rose 13.9 percent in 1988, to 2,331. The largest increase came among criminal cases, which jumped 22.5 percent, to 1,176 cases commenced. In Surry County, the number of commenced criminal cases increased 52.6 percent. Civil cases rose only 6.4 percent, to 1,155 cases. The numbers of civil cases actually declined in Prince George and Surry Counties. Felony cases represented a large share of commenced cases in 1988, making up 41 percent of the caseload. Statewide, felony cases accounted for only 30 percent of the circuit caseload. In the Sixth Circuit, the remaining commenced cases were divided between law cases (20 percent), equity cases (29 percent), and misdemeanor cases (10 percent). The average caseload in the Sixth of 1,166 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth among the thirty-one circuits. The average caseload fell below the state average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge, and the average caseload among rural circuits: 1,349 cases per judge. The average civil and the average criminal caseloads ranked twenty-eighth and twenty-fifth, and were also lighter than both the state and rural average caseloads. The average civil caseload in the Sixth was 578 cases per judge, compared to a statewide average of 774 cases per judge, and a rural average of 676 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 588 cases per judge; the statewide average was 677 cases per judge, the rural average, 673 cases per judge. The number of cases concluded in the Sixth Circuit rose 12.9 percent, to 2,164 cases. Four hundred twenty-eight civil cases were concluded; about 20 percent by a judge trial, and about three percent by a jury trial. Statewide, only 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases were terminated by judge trial, and only 1.8 percent by jury. Almost 69 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62 percent statewide. Of the 1,060 criminal cases that were concluded in the Sixth Circuit in 1988, 38.3 percent were concluded in a judge trial, 2.4 percent were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, these figures were 25 and five percent, respectively. More than 85 percent of concluded criminal cases ended within five months of filing. Statewide, only 79.5 percent were concluded within that time. Fifty juries were impaneled in 1988, up 4.2 percent from 1987.

The general district court experienced a 13 percent rise in the number of new cases filed. The rise was almost evenly spread across the docket: criminal cases, which made up ten percent of the caseload, rose 15.8 percent, to 6,456; traffic cases (74 percent of the caseload) rose 12.3 percent, to 45,624; and civil cases, the remaining 16 percent of the caseload, rose 14.5 percent, to 9,883 cases. However, this rise was not evenly spread across the localities of the district; the increase in general district cases ranged from only 3.6 percent in Brunswick County to 34.2 percent in Greensville County. The total district caseload of 61,963 new cases filed was more than 7,000 cases higher than in 1987, and resulted in an average caseload of 30,982 cases per judge which ranked eighth in the state. The average state caseload was 25,729 cases per judge. The average criminal and civil caseloads, at 3,228 cases per judge and 4,942 cases per judge, ranked twenty-fourth and twenty-third, respectively. Both were below the average state caseloads, and the average caseloads among rural districts. The average rural criminal caseload was 3,879 cases per judge; the average rural civil caseload was 5,644 cases per judge. However, the average traffic caseload in the Sixth ranked third in the state, and, at 22,812 cases per judge, was almost 1,000 cases higher than the state average traffic caseload of 13,757 cases per judge. There were 55,514 hearings in the Sixth circuit in 1988, a 22.9 percent increase over 1987.

New cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court rose only six percent in 1988, to 5,119 cases. In Prince George and Sussex Counties, new juvenile and domestic relations cases declined 14.2 percent and three percent, respectively. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was thirty-first in the state, at 2,560 cases per judge. The average caseload was well below the state average caseload of 3,895 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 3,476 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload in the Sixth district also ranked thirty-first in the state. The 3,133 new juvenile cases filed showed a 4.1 percent increase over 1987, and resulted in an average juvenile caseload of 1,567 cases per judge. This compares to an average state juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge, and an average rural juvenile caseload of 2,069 cases per judge. Juvenile cases made up 61 percent of all new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in the Sixth District in 1988. New domestic relations cases, which comprised the remaining 39 percent of the docket, rose 9.1 percent in 1988, to 1,986 cases. The average domestic relations caseload of 993 cases per judge ranked twenty-eighth in the state, and was also well below the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,453 cases per judge, and the rural average domestic relations caseload of 1,407 cases per judge.

Eighteen magistrates recorded 20,453 activity hours in the Sixth District in 1988, resulting in 22,871 transactions and 17,895 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 8,433 processes issued. Probable cause hearings had an issuance rate of 77.1 percent. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 76.8 percent, resulted in 5,885 processes issued. Forty-seven civil warrants were issued in 1988; 3,530 other processes were issued.

Seventh Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Newport News is served by the Seventh Judicial Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded 144,903 residents in this area, including 41,233 juveniles. The total population is expected to increase by 13.9 percent by 1990, to 165,100. The juvenile population is projected to decrease to 38,442, a 6.8 percent decline.

Douglas M. Smith, J. Warren Stephens, and Fred W. Bateman served the Seventh Circuit Court in 1988. Judge Bateman retired on April 1, 1989 and was replaced by Robert W. Curran, who was elected from the general district court. Judge Curran served the general district court with James H. Harvell and Randolph T. West. Robert P. Frank and Robert M. Yacobi served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Judges in the district court used 147 days for substitute and recalled, retired judges. This resulted in an average of 29.4 days per judge, slightly higher than the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases in the circuit court increased 2.2 percent over 1987, to 4,598 cases. The number of cases concluded rose two percent to 4,388. The number of civil cases commenced dropped by 1.9 percent, from 2,470 in 1987 to 2,424 in 1988. Criminal cases rose 7.1 percent, from 2,029 to 2,174. The distribution of the caseload in the Seventh was very similar to the statewide distribution of 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. Distribution in the Seventh was 25 percent law, 28 percent equity, 33 percent felony, and 14 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge ranked eighth in the state, and, at 1,533, was slightly higher than the urban average caseload of 1,527. The average civil caseload was 808 cases per judge, and also ranked eighth. The average criminal caseload ranked ninth in the state, at 1,463. Of the 2,206 civil cases that were concluded, 6.2 percent were ended by judge trial, and one percent by jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent ended by judge trial, and 1.8 percent by jury trial. One percent of the 2,182 criminal cases concluded were concluded by jury trial and 22.2 percent were terminated by judge trial. This compares with the state averages of 5 percent by jury and 25 percent by judge. Approximately three-quarters (76.2 percent) of civil cases were concluded in 12 months of filing. Of criminal cases, 84.4 percent were concluded within 5 months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time frames. The number of juries impaneled decreased 17.1 percent, to 34.

In the general district courts, 80,715 new cases were filed. This represents an 8.4 percent increase from 1987. The new cases were distributed: 19 percent criminal, 33 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. Statewide, the distribution was: 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. The seventh ranked tenth in the state in the number of hearings held, with 93,231. This represents an 8.4 percent rise over 1987. The average criminal caseload per judge was 5,150, sixth in the state. The average traffic caseload was 8,854, ranking twenty-sixth. The average civil caseload was 12,901 cases per judge, and ranked fourth in the state. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 7,836.

New cases in the juvenile and domestic relations court rose 39.6 percent, to 9,182. Juvenile cases rose 29.4 percent, to 4,427. Domestic relations cases rose 50.6 percent, to 4,755. The judges in the Seventh District averaged 4,519 juvenile and domestic relations cases each in 1988, well above the state average of 3,895 cases per judge and above the urban average of 4,328 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 2,214 was lower than the state average of 2,442. The domestic relations caseload, however, ranked third in the state. At 2,378 cases per judge, it was significantly higher than both the state average of 1,453 and the urban average of 1,500 cases per judge. New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court were almost evenly split between juvenile cases (48 percent) and domestic relations cases (52 percent).

The magistrates recorded 9,920 activity hours, resulting in 30,849 transactions and 21,526 processes issued. The number of transactions increased 2.3 percent over the number recorded in 1987 while processes issued rose 2.6 percent from 1987. Nearly half (14,159) of these processes were issued after probable cause hearings. These hearings had an issuance rate of 80.3 percent. Bond hearing had an issuance rate of 48.5 percent, and resulted in 5,477 of the issued processes.

Eighth Judicial Circuit and District

The City of Hampton is served by the Eighth Judicial Circuit. According to the 1980 Census, there were 122,617 residents in Hampton. Juveniles accounted for 35,639 of these residents. By 1990, it is projected that the population will increase to 128,700, including 31,895 juveniles. This is a projected five percent increase in total population.

Nelson T. Overton, John D. Gray, and Walter J. Ford served the Eighth Circuit Court. Henry D. Kashouty, Thomas H. Wilson, II and Wilford Taylor, Jr., served the general district court. Louis R. Lerner and Nelson T. Durden served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The Eighth used 127.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This is an average of 25.6 days per judge, slightly higher than the state average of 25.3 days.

Commenced circuit court cases declined 1.7 percent in 1988, to 4,083 cases. Concluded cases increased 19.5 percent, to 4,075. Civil cases accounted for 2,175 of the commenced cases, criminal cases accounted for the remaining 1,908. Civil cases increased 0.9 percent, while criminal cases declined 4.4 percent. The caseload distribution in the Eighth was: 23 percent law, 30 percent equity, 22 percent felony, and 25 percent misdemeanor. The felony proportion was slightly lower and the misdemeanor portion slightly higher than the statewide distributions of 30 percent and 16 percent. The average caseload per judge was 1,361 cases per judge, which ranked twentieth in the state and was below the state and urban averages. The average civil caseload was 725 cases, which ranked fifteenth. The average criminal caseload was 636 cases, ranking twentieth among the 31 circuits. Of the 2,074 concluded civil cases, 14.8 percent were terminated by a judge trial, 1.4 percent by jury trial. Nearly half (49.6 percent) were concluded within twelve months. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury, and 62 percent were concluded within 12 months of filing. Of criminal cases in the Eighth, 15.4 percent were concluded in a judge trial, 2.4 percent ended with a jury trial, and 86.6 percent were concluded within 5 months. Statewide, the statistics were: 25 percent concluded by judge, five percent by jury, and 79.5 percent were concluded within five months. Fifty-five juries were impaneled in the Eighth, an increase of 34.1 percent from 1987.

In the general district court, there were 83,111 new cases filed, an increase of 16.2 percent from 1987. These cases were distributed: 18 percent criminal, 46 percent traffic, and 36 percent civil. This compares to a statewide distribution of 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. There were 112,554 hearings in 1988, an increase of 14.8 percent. The general district court judges averaged 27,704 new cases each, above the statewide average of 25,729 cases, but below the urban average of 28,847 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload in the general district court was 4,857, which ranked seventh in the state, and was above the state average caseload of 4,136, and the urban average caseload of 4,348. The average traffic caseload was 12,832, while the average civil caseload was 10,015 cases per judge. These ranked sixteenth and eighth, respectively.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court increased 25.2 percent, to 6,945 cases. The 4,683 new juvenile cases represented a 17.9 percent increase, while domestic relations cases jumped 43.4 percent, to 2,262. The distribution of these cases (67 percent juvenile, 33 percent domestic relations) was close to the statewide distribution of 63 percent juvenile, 37 percent domestic relations. The juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 3,473 total new cases in 1988, below the state average of 3,895 cases per judge, and well below the urban average of 4,328. The judges in the Eighth District averaged 2,342 new juvenile cases and 1,131 new domestic relations cases each in 1988.

The magistrates of the Eighth recorded 10,628 activity hours, which resulted in 33,664 transactions and 27,713 processes issued. More than half (18,106) of these processes were issued after probable cause hearings, 8,186 were for bonds, one civil warrant was issued, and 1,420 were for other processes. The issuance rate after probable cause hearings was 94.7 percent. After bond hearings, the issuance rate was 62.4 percent. Statewide, these issuance rates are 87.2 percent and 61.8 percent, respectively. The number of transactions rose slightly (0.4 percent) from 1987, while the number of processes issued increased by 3.5 percent.

Ninth Judicial Circuit and District

The Ninth Circuit serves the counties of Charles City, Gloucester, King and Queen, King William, Middlesex, Mathews, New Kent, James City, and York, as well as the cities of Williamsburg and Poquoson. In 1980, there were 143,418 residents in this area, including 39,948 juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to rise 27.5 percent, to 182,800. The juvenile population is expected to increase 2.4 percent, to 40,899.

Russell M. Carneal, John E. DeHardit, and G. Duane Holloway served the Ninth Circuit Court in 1988. William T. Bareford and J. R. Zepkin served on the general district bench. The juvenile and domestic relations bench was served by Herbert I. L. Feild and Samuel T. Powell. Substitute and retired, recalled judges were used for a total of 138.2 days; an average of 34.6 days per judge. Statewide, substitute and retired, recalled judges were used an average of 25.3 days per judge.

The Ninth Circuit experienced a 5.2 percent increase in commenced cases in 1988. Locally, changes in the number of commenced circuit cases ranged from a 13.6 percent decline in Mathews County to an 18.6 percent increase in King William County. A total of 4,012 cases were commenced last year in the Ninth; 2,199 civil cases and 1,813 criminal. The numbers of criminal and civil cases showed exactly the same rate of rise as the combined total. However, there were great local variations. For instance, in King William County there was a 79 percent jump in the number of commenced criminal cases, and a 15.5 percent drop in the number of civil cases. The caseload distribution in the Ninth was: law cases, 21 percent; equity cases, 34 percent; felony cases, 26 percent; and misdemeanor cases, 20 percent. Statewide, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. In the Ninth, the number of concluded cases rose 9.8 percent, nearly twice the rate as the number of cases commenced. As a result, pending cases dropped 1.1 percent, to 3,559. The average caseload in the Ninth Circuit was 1,337 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was 733 cases per judge, the average criminal caseload, 604 cases per judge. The total average caseload and the average criminal caseload ranked twenty-third and twenty-fourth, respectively. However, the average civil caseload ranked thirteenth among the 31 Circuits, and fell between the average rural civil caseload of 676 cases per judge and the average state civil caseload of 774 cases per judge. Of the 2,183 civil cases that were concluded in 1988, 6.1 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 1.2 percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases ended in judge trials, 1.8 percent were ended by jury trials. Just over half (56.8 percent) of concluded civil cases were ended within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62 percent were ended within that time frame. Thirty-four percent of the 1,868 concluded criminal cases were ended in a judge trial; 2.6 percent were terminated by a jury trial. Statewide, these figures were 25 and five percent, respectively. About 75 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing. Across the state, 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded in five months. Seventy juries were impaneled in 1988, an 11.1 percent increase over 1987.

The number of new cases filed in general district court rose 11.6 percent in 1988, to 58,176 new cases. The greatest increase came among civil cases, which comprised 19 percent of the docket, and increased 14.3 percent, to 10,781 new cases. In Charles City County alone, civil cases increased 81.8 percent in 1988. Traffic cases (64 percent of the docket) increased 13.3 percent, to 37,043 new cases, while criminal cases (18 percent of the docket) increased only 4.4 percent, to 10,352 new cases. Even with such a relatively small increase, the average criminal caseload of 5,176 cases per judge ranked fifth among thirty-two districts in the state, and surpassed the average state criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge. Conversely, although there was such a large increase in the number of civil cases filed, the average civil caseload in the Ninth ranked twentieth in the state, and at 5,391 cases per judge, was below the state average civil caseload of 7,836 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 5,644 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload of 18,522 cases per judge ranked sixth, and was nearly 5,000 cases higher than the state average of 13,757 cases per judge. A seven percent increase in the number of hearings in the Ninth resulted in a total of 53,146 hearings recorded during 1988.

An eighteen percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court resulted in 6,615 new cases placed on the docket in 1988. Most of these cases (4,051) were juvenile cases, which showed a 16.5 percent increase over 1987. Domestic relations cases, which comprised 39 percent of the docket, rose 20.7 percent, to 2,563 new cases. Mathews County experienced a drop in both juvenile and domestic relations cases (33 percent and 26 percent, respectively). Charles City County reported an 18.9 percent decline in the number of juvenile cases. Williamsburg City reported a 2.4 percent drop in juvenile cases. King William and Middlesex Counties also reported declines in domestic relations cases: six percent and 13.3 percent, respectively. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 2,206 cases per judge and 1,282 cases per judge, ranked twenty-first and twenty-second among state districts, and fell below the rural average caseloads of 2,069 juvenile cases per judge and 1,407 domestic relations cases per judge.

The 17 magistrates of the Ninth District recorded 16,633 activity hours and 18,493 transactions, including 15,352 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 8,628 processes, and an issuance rate of 79.6 percent. Statewide, the issuance rate of probable cause hearings was 87.2 percent. Bond hearings in the Ninth District resulted in 4,518 processes issued. The Ninth's issuance rate of 87.4 percent in bond hearings far surpassed the state issuance rate off 61.8 percent. Civil warrants accounted for 1,934 processes issued; 272 other processes were issued.

Tenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Tenth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Prince Edward, and the city of South Boston. The 1980 Census reported a population to 139,585 residents, of which 39,658 were juveniles. The number of residents is expected to increase by 3.9 percent to a total population of 145,000 by 1990. However, the juvenile population is predicted to decline to 25,000, an 11.8 percent reduction.

The Tenth Judicial Circuit has two authorized judgeships, which were filled in 1988 by Charles L. McCormick, III, and John R. Snoddy, Jr. William Hay, Jr., Robert B. Spencer, Jr., and Irvin D. Sugg served the Tenth General District bench. William L. Wellons and Harry G. Lawson served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Tenth District used 105.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This averaged to 21.2 days per judge, below the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

Commenced cases in the Tenth Circuit rose 7.8 percent in 1988, to a total of 2,807 cases. However, the dramatic increase of 30.8 percent in criminal cases was completely responsible for the rise; the number of commenced civil cases fell 7.3 percent, to 1,451. Despite the rise in the number of commenced cases, the distribution of the caseload followed roughly the same pattern as the statewide distribution. In the Tenth Circuit, law cases accounted for 20 percent of the caseload, equity cases were 32 percent of the caseload, felony cases 33 percent, and misdemeanor cases, 15 percent of the caseload. Across the state, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload of 1,404 cases per judge ranked eighteenth in the state, and fell between the rural average circuit caseload of 1,349 cases per judge and the state average circuit caseload of 1,452 cases per judge. The average civil caseload (726 cases per judge) ranked fourteenth in the state, and also fell between the state and rural averages (774 cases per judge, and 676 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload of 678 cases per judge ranked eleventh in the state. The average criminal caseload was one case higher than the state average criminal caseload. Of the 1,413 civil cases concluded last year in the Tenth, 11.1 percent were concluded by a judge trial, and less than one percent (0.8 percent) were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury trial. About 28 percent of the 1,365 concluded criminal cases were concluded by judge trial; 2.3 percent were concluded by jury. Statewide, the proportions were 25 and five percent, respectively. Almost 76 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62 percent statewide. Among criminal cases, 81.9 percent were concluded within five months, compared to 79.5 percent statewide. The number of juries impaneled fell sharply (26.7 percent) in 1988. Only 55 juries were impaneled.

In the general district courts, 57,548 new cases were filed in 1988, an 8.8 percent increase over 1987. The greatest increase was recorded among civil cases, which comprised 28 percent of new cases filed, and rose 14 percent to 16,342 cases. Traffic cases rose 7.7 percent, to 334,191 cases. Traffic cases made up 59 percent of the docket. Criminal cases, which shared the smallest portion (12 percent) of new cases in the Tenth, also showed the smallest increase: just 2.6 percent, to 7,015 cases in 1988. Almost 50,000 hearings were held in 1988, a 6.7 percent rise over 1987. The average criminal caseload of 2,338 cases per judge was one of the lowest in the state and well below the state average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge and the rural average criminal caseload of 3,879 cases per judge. The average civil caseload (5,447 cases per judge) and average traffic caseload (11,397 cases per judge) ranked eighteenth and twenty-second, respectively. Both of these caseloads were lower than the rural average caseloads of 5,644 civil case per judge and 12,431 traffic cases per judge. The total average general district caseload of 19,183 cases per judge ranked twenty-sixth in the state, and was more than 2,000 cases lower than the rural average caseload of 21,955 cases per judge.

In juvenile and domestic relations courts, 7,217 new cases were filed. This represents a 5.3 percent increase over the 1987 total of 6,854 new cases filed. Fifth-three percent of these cases were juvenile cases. The number of juvenile cases filed rose 3.5 percent, to 3,857 new cases in 1988. The remaining 47 percent of the docket was domestic relations cases, which rose 7.4 percent over 1987. to 3,360 new cases. The average juvenile caseload of 1,929 cases per judge ranked twenty-third in the state, and was below the average state juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge and the average rural juvenile caseload of 2,069 cases per judge. The total average caseload ranked twentieth in the state and at 3,609 cases per judge, was below the state average caseload 3,895 cases per judge, but higher than the rural average caseload of 3,476 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,680 cases per judge ranked fourteenth in the state, and surpassed the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,453 cases per judge.

The 25 magistrates of the Tenth recorded 23,830 activity hours, during which they completed 25,204 transactions and issued 19,903 processes. Probable cause hearings resulted in 8,362 processes issued; 4,929 bonds were issued. Over 6,000 civil warrants were issued; 552 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings in the Tenth had an 82.4 percent issuance rate. Statewide, the issuance rate was 87.2 percent. Bond hearings statewide had an issuance rate of 61.8 percent. In the Tenth, bonds were issued after 61.4 percent of bond hearings.

Eleventh Judicial Circuit and District

The Eleventh Judicial Circuit encompasses the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan, and the City of Petersburg. The 1980 Census reported a total 99,790 residents in the area, including 28,276 juveniles. The total population is expected to increase only 1.3 percent, to 101,100 residents by 1990. The juvenile population is expected to decline by more than 10 percent, to 25,425 juveniles by the year 1990.

The Eleventh Circuit has two authorized judgeships, which were filled in 1988 by Oliver A. Pollard, Jr. and Thomas V. Warren. James F. D'Alton and Richard E. Lewis, Jr., served the Eleventh's general district courts. The juvenile and domestic relations court was served by Larry G. Elder and L. L. Mason, Jr. The judges of the Eleventh District used 93.4 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 23.4 days per judge was slightly less than the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the Eleventh Circuit rose only slightly (0.9 percent) in 1988, to 2,874 cases. The number of commenced criminal cases dropped one percent, to 1,595. This drop was offset by a 3.4 percent increase in commenced civil cases. Felony cases took up an unusually large share of the docket, comprising 40 percent of commenced cases. Statewide, felony cases were only 30 percent of cases commenced in 1988. Law cases comprised 20 percent of the Eleventh's caseload, equity cases were 24 percent, and misdemeanor cases accounted for the remaining 16 percent. Statewide, these caseload shares were: 25 percent, 29 percent, and 16 percent, respectively. Because of the large number of felony cases, the average criminal caseload in the Eleventh Circuit ranked fifth in the state, at 798 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload in the state was 677 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Eleventh was 640 cases per judge. The civil caseload ranked twenty-sixth in the state, and was well below the state average civil caseload of 774 cases per judge, and below the average civil caseload among rural circuits; 676 cases per judge. The combined average caseload of 1,437 cases per judge ranked fifteenth in the state and fell between the rural average caseload of 1,349 cases per judge and the state average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge. Just over 2,700 cases were concluded in 1988, a 13.6 percent increase over 1987. Of the 1,091 civil cases that were concluded, 5.3 percent were terminated in a trial by judge, 1.6 percent were concluded by jury trial. More than 75 percent were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded by judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury trial, and 62 percent within 12 months of filing. Almost six percent of the 1,615 criminal cases concluded in the Eleventh were concluded by jury trial; 47.4 percent were concluded by judge trial. Statewide, five percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, twenty-five percent ended by judge trials. Over 77 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing, just below the state total of 79.5 percent concluded in that time. Eighty-eight juries were impaneled in 1988, a 13.7 percent decline from 1987.

In general district court, 46,132 new cases were filed in 1988. This represents a 2.8 percent increase over the number filed in 1987. The numbers of criminal and civil cases rose 12.7 and 16.3 percent, respectively, but were offset by a 5.9 percent drop in the number of traffic case, which comprised 53 percent of the total caseload. Criminal cases, of which there were 9,668, comprised 21 percent of the caseload. Civil cases (12,607 cases filed) made up the remaining 26 percent. The number of hearings in the Eleventh District rose 8.7 percent, to 52,356. The average general district caseload of 23,066 cases per judge ranked eighteenth among the thirty-two districts. The average traffic caseload (12,199 cases per judge) ranked seventeenth and the average civil caseload (6,034 cases per judge) ranked sixteenth. The average traffic caseload fell below the average rural traffic caseload of 12,431 cases per judge, but the average civil caseload fell between the average rural civil caseload (5,644 cases per judge) and the average civil caseload statewide (7,836 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload in the Eleventh surpassed both the average rural criminal caseload of 3,879 cases per judge and the state average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge. At 4,834 cases per judge, the Eleventh's average criminal caseload was the eighth highest in the state.

The number of new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose 11.4 percent, to 5,616 cases. Most of this increase came among juvenile cases, which comprised 56 percent of the caseload, and at 3,151 new cases filed in 1988, registered a 21 percent increase over 1987. Domestic relations cases rose only 1.2 percent, to 2,465. The juvenile and domestic relations average caseloads both ranked among the bottom third in the state. The average juvenile caseload of 1,576 cases per judge ranked thirtieth in the state, and was well below the rural average juvenile caseload of 2,069 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,233 cases per judge ranked twenty-third, and was also below the rural average (1,407 domestic relations cases per judge).

The magistrates of the Eleventh issued 21,444 processes in 18,670 recorded activity hours. More than half of these processes (11,342) were issued after probable cause hearings. The issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 86.5 percent. Bond hearings had an issuance rate of 73.7 percent, and resulted in 8,903 processes issued. Twenty-four civil warrants were issued; 1,175 other processes were issued.

Twelfth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twelfth Judicial Circuit serves Chesterfield County and the City of Colonial Heights. According to the 1980 Census, there were 157,881 residents in this area, including 49,891 juveniles. The population is expected to increase dramatically by 1990. The total population is projected to increase by 39.1 percent, to 219,600 residents, while the juvenile population is expected to increase 22.8 percent, to 61,279 juveniles.

Herbert C. Gill, Jr., William R. Shelton, and John F. Daffron, Jr., served on the Twelfth Circuit bench in 1988. Timothy J. Hauler, Robert D. Laney, and Philip V. Daffron served the General District court. Judge Philip Daffron joined the bench on April 1, 1988, replacing Judge John E. Dodson, who resigned. Marvin L. Garner and John H. Thomas served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Twelfth District used 205.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges; an average of 41.2 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in 1988 rose 25.2 percent, to 4,778 cases. The number of cases concluded rose at about the same rate, up 22 percent, to 4,132 cases concluded. The number of commenced civil cases rose 18.2 percent, to 3,033 cases. The average civil caseload of 1,011 cases per judge was the second highest in the state , and well surpassed the state average civil caseload of 774 cases per judge and the average civil caseload among urban circuits, 847 cases per judge. Criminal cases showed a greater increase in 1988, up almost 40 percent, to 1,745. In Chesterfield County, the number of criminal cases increased almost 37 percent, to 1,518 cases. However, the average criminal caseload of 582 cases per judge ranked twenty-sixth among 31 circuits, and was lower than the state average criminal caseload of 677 cases per judge. The 1988 caseload distribution in the Twelfth was: 23 percent law, 40 percent equity, 23 percent felony, and 14 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution ran; 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. Just over one percent of the 2,554 civil cases concluded in 1988 were ended in a jury trial. Seven and one-half percent concluded in a judge trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases terminated in a judge trial, 1.8 percent in a jury trial. Of the 1,578 concluded criminal cases, 27.5 percent ended in a judge trial, 4.8 percent in a jury trial. This is very close to the statewide totals of 25 and five percent, respectively. Over two-thirds of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, while 80.4 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within the respective time periods. Ninety-three juries were impaneled in 1988, a 20.8 percent increase over 1987.

In general district court, 63,116 new cases were filed. Criminal cases rose just 0.3 percent, to 8,982 new cases, but traffic cases jumped 27.2 percent, to 39,632 new cases, and the number of new civil cases shot up over 30 percent, to 14,502 new cases. Overall, the general district caseload increased by 23.3 percent. Locally, Chesterfield County experienced a 23.6 percent increase in general district cases, while Colonial Heights experienced a 20.4 percent decline in general district cases. In Colonial Heights, there was a 17.5 percent decline in the number of civil cases. Chesterfield experienced a 2.5 percent decline in the number of criminal cases. The average criminal caseload of 2,994 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh in the state, far below the state average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload of 13,211 cases per judge ranked fifteenth, still below the state average traffic caseload of 13,757 cases per judge. Even the average civil caseload of 4,834 cases per judge was relatively low. It ranked twenty-fourth in the state, and was more than 3,000 cases lighter than the state average civil caseload of 7,386 cases per judge. The total average general district caseload of 21,039 cases per judge also ranked twenty-fourth in the state, and was also more than 4,000 cases below the state average caseload of 25,729 cases per judge. The number of hearings in 1988 showed a 16.2 percent increase over 1987. Almost 79,000 hearings were held in the Twelfth in 1988.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose 21.3 percent, to 10,292 new cases. Thee greatest increase came among juvenile cases, which made up the larger portion (66 percent) of the caseload, and showed a 22.9 percent increase, to 6,810 new cases. New domestic relations cases totaled 3,482, an 18.3 percent rise over 1987. The average juvenile caseload of 3,405 cases per judge was the fourth heaviest in the state, outstripping the state average juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge and the average juvenile caseload among urban districts, 2,829 cases per judge. The total juvenile and domestic relations caseload also ranked fourth in the state. At 5,146 cases per judge, it was much greater than the average juvenile and domestic relations caseload statewide (3,895 cases per judge) or even among urban districts (4,328 cases per judge). The average domestic relations caseload was the eleventh highest in the state, and at 1,741 cases per judge, was closer to the domestic relations caseload average among urban districts; 1,500 cases per judge.

The ten magistrates of the Twelfth recorded 12,617 activity hours, 31,540 transactions, and 24,137 processes issued. Nearly 6,000 civil warrants were issued. There were 12,938 probable cause hearings, resulting in 11,018 processes issued (an 85.2 percent issuance rate), and 12,348 bond hearings, resulting in 6,935 processes issued (a 56.2 percent issuance rate). Statewide, the issuance rate at probable cause hearings was 87.2 percent, at bond hearings, 61.8 percent.

Thirteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Thirteenth Judicial Circuit serves the city of Richmond. According to the 1980 Census, the population was 219,214 residents, including 49,024 juveniles. The population is projected to decline to 213,500 by 1990. The juvenile population is also projected to decline by 14.5 percent, to 41,916.

There are eight authorized judgeships in the Thirteenth circuit. These are filled by James M. Lumpkin, Robert W. Duling, Thomas N. Nance, Theodore J. Markow, James B. Wilkinson, Randall G. Johnson, Melvin R. Hughes, Jr., and Robert L. Harris. The general district courts are served by Jose R. Davila, Walter W. Stout, III, Thomas O. Jones, Edgar L. Turlington, Jr., Gregory L. Rupe, Ralph B. Robertson, William L. Wimbish, and Lemuel E. DeBerry. Alton E. Bryant, Jr., Willard H. Douglas, Jr., and Arlin F. Ruby served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Judges of the Thirteenth District used 412.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average of 37.5 days per judge is 12 days higher than the state average of 25.3 days.

Commenced cases in the Thirteenth Circuit increased 6.1 percent in 1988, to 11,734 cases. Concluded cases increased 2.9 percent, to 10,442. The number of cases pending rose 16.3 percent, from 7,913 in 1987 to 9,205 in 1988. The number of civil cases increased by 13.5 percent, while the number of criminal cases decreased 2.1 percent. In 1988, there were 6,602 civil and 5,132 criminal cases commenced. Commenced cases were distributed: 41 percent law, 15 percent equity, 34 percent felony, and 10 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, law and equity cases made up 25 and 29 percent of commenced cases. The average circuit caseload in Richmond in 1988 was 1,467 cases per judge. This ranked fourteenth in the state, and was only 15 cases higher than the state average of 1,452. The caseload average in the Thirteenth was below the urban average of 1,527 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was 825 cases per judge, which ranked seventh in the state, and while higher than the state average of 774, was slightly below the urban average of 847. The average criminal caseload was 642. This ranked nineteenth in the state, and was below both the state and urban averages. Nearly 18 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial. This compares to a state total of 12.6 percent. Slightly more than 3 percent were concluded by jury trial, nearly double the state total of 1.8 percent. Among criminal cases, 20.6 percent were concluded by judge trial, 11.6 percent by jury trial. The state totals were 25 and five percent, respectively. About 71 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Slightly more than 95 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Across the state, 62 percent of civil and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time frames. Thirty-two percent more juries were impaneled in 1988, up from 347 in 1987 to 458 in 1988.

New cases rose 8.3 percent in general district court, to 238,174. Fourteen percent of these cases were criminal, 25 percent were traffic and the remaining 61 percent were civil cases. Statewide, the distribution of cases was: 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and only 30 percent civil. Hearings rose 4.4 percent, to 227,079. The general district judges in the Thirteenth averaged 29,772 cases each in 1988, above both the state and urban averages. The average criminal caseload in the Thirteenth was 4,069. The average traffic caseload was 7,531, the third lowest traffic caseload in the state. However, the average civil caseload in the Thirteenth was the highest in the state at 18,172 cases per judge.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, the 11,794 new cases filed represented an 8.9 percent rise over 1987. Juvenile cases rose six percent, domestic relations cases rose 12.8 percent. The juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 3,931 new cases each in 1988, above the state average of 3,895 cases but below the urban average of 4,328 cases per judge. Juvenile cases made up slightly more than half (56 percent) of the caseload. The average juvenile caseload was 2,219, which ranked sixteenth among the 32 districts in Virginia. The average domestic relations caseload was 1,712, which ranked thirteenth, and was higher than both the state average of 1,453 and the urban average of 1,500.

The ten magistrates of Richmond recorded 17,235 activity hours, resulting in 35,549 processes issued and 54,924 transactions. Most of these (25,111) processes were issued after probable cause hearings, where the issuance rate was 86.7 percent. Bond hearings resulted in 9,969 processes issued, with an issuance rate of 39.4 percent. Seventy-three civil warrants were issued, and the remaining 396 were for other processes. The number of transactions fell 3.1 percent from 1987 while the number of processes issued dropped by 4.3 percent.

Fourteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Fourteenth Judicial Circuit serves the county of Henrico. There were 180,700 residents in this area, according to the 1980 Census. Juveniles accounted for 46,880 of these residents. The population is projected to increase to 214,800 by 1990. The juvenile population is expected to decline 3.6 percent, to 45,169.

James E. Kulp, Buford M. Parsons, Jr., and Joseph F. Spinella served the circuit court in 1988. Robert M. Wallace served until his retirement on May 1, 1988. He was replaced by George F. Tidey, who was elected from the general district court. In the general district court in 1988 were: Donald R. Howren, Lee A. Harris, Jr., who replaced the retiring H. Ratcliffe Turner, and Burnett Miller, III, who replaced Judge Tidey when he moved to the circuit bench. Robert J. Smith and J. Mercer White served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Judge White retired May 1, 1989 and was replaced by William G. Boice. One hundred ninety-seven days were used by the district court judges for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in a per-judge average of 39.4 days.

In 1988, there were only 45 more commenced circuit cases than in 1987. This represents a 0.9 percent increase, to 5,202 cases. Civil cases increased by 16.7 percent, but criminal cases dropped 11.2 percent. The 1988 total number of civil and criminal cases was 2,605 and 2,597, respectively. Distribution in the Fourteenth was: 16 percent law, 34 percent equity, 31 percent felony, and 19 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload was 1,301 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was 651 cases, while the average criminal caseload was 677 cases per judge. These average caseloads all ranked in the lower half among circuits in Virginia. Civil cases were concluded 9.4 percent of the time by judge trial, 0.9 percent by jury. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were ended by judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury. Among criminal cases, 22.9 percent were terminated by judge trial, 3.9 percent by jury. These figures are similar to the statewide totals of 25 percent judge, five percent jury. Eighty-nine juries were impaneled in Henrico in 1988, a 19.8 percent decline from 1987.

New cases in the general district court rose 17.1 percent, to 78,644. New criminal cases increased by almost 18 percent, traffic cases jumped almost 19 percent while new civil cases rose 13 percent. The number of hearings held increased almost 21 percent from 1987. In Henrico, 12 percent of all new general district cases were criminal, 64 percent were traffic, and 25 percent were civil cases. Statewide, the distribution was: 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. The average caseload in the Fourteenth District was 26,215 cases per judge, above the statewide average of 25,729, but below the average for urban districts (28,847 cases per judge). Criminal and [illegible] average caseloads fell in the middle to lower rankings in the state. However, the average traffic caseload of 16,667, ranked eighth in the state, and was higher than both the state average caseload of 13,757 and the urban average caseload of 14,852. Hearings rose 20.8 percent, to 77,740.

There were 8,879 new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court, a 34.8 percent increase over 1987. Sixty-one percent of these were juvenile cases, 39 percent were domestic relations cases. New juvenile cases increased 25 percent from 4,342 cases in 1987 to 5,442 cases in 1988. The number of new domestic relations cases jumped 53 percent from 2,244 cases in 1987 to 3,437 in 1988. Statewide, the distribution was 63 percent juvenile, 37 percent domestic relations. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseloads of 2,721 and 1,719 respectively, ranking eleventh and twelfth among the districts.

There are nine magistrates in the Fourteenth. In 1988, they issued 47,073 processes in 15,557 recorded activity hours. Of processes issued, 12,948 were issued after probable cause hearings, 9,953 for bonds, 104 for civil warrants, and 24,068 for other processes. Processes were issued in 92.6 percent of probable cause hearings. Bond hearings had an issuance rate of 71.7 percent. Statewide, these issuance rates were 87.2 percent and 61.[illegible] percent, respectively. Fifteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg are served by the Fifteenth Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 218,886 residents of which 64,698 were juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 24.3 percent. The juvenile population is expected to increase by 10.2 percent to 71,304.

The Fifteenth Circuit Court was served in 1988 by Richard H. C. Taylor, J. M. H. Willis, Jr., William H. Ledbetter, Jr. and Joseph E. Spruill, Jr. Dixon L. Foster served the Fifteenth Circuit until his retirement on September 1, 1988. He was replaced by Judge Spruill. Serving the general district bench were: Tristram T. Hyde, IV, James W. Haley, Jr., James Peyton Farmer, and John R. Stevens. Judge Stevens joined the bench on April, 1, 1988, replacing Joseph L. Savage who retired January 1, 1988. William J. Cox, Walther B. Fidler and J. Dean Lewis served the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The judges of the Fifteenth District used 308.2 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This was an average of 44 days per judge, well above the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

Commenced were 6,046 cases in 1988, a 9.4 percent rise over 1987. Locally, the changes in commenced cases ranged from an 11.7 percent decline in the City of Fredericksburg to a 45.1 percent rise in Richmond County. Civil cases experienced an increase of 12 percent, from 2,995 inn 1987 to 3,353 in 1988. Criminal cases rose 6.4 percent, from 2,531 in 1987 to 2,693 cases in 1988. In Northumberland County, the number of criminal cases increased 157.1 percent. One-third of the commenced cases were equity cases, 22 percent were law cases, 27 percent were felony cases, and 17 percent were misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload of 1,512 cases per judge ranked tenth in the state. The state average caseload was 1,452 cases per judge, and the average caseload among rural districts was 1,394 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked thirteenth in the state, and, at 673 cases per judge, equaled the average rural criminal caseload. However, the average civil caseload in the Fifteenth was the sixth highest in the state, and at 838 cases per judge, surpassed both the average rural civil caseload of 676 cases per judge and the state average civil caseload of 774 cases per judge. Almost 5,700 hundred cases were concluded in 1988, a 6.9 percent increase over 1987. Of the 3,143 civil cases that were concluded in the Fifteenth Circuit, 8.7 percent were concluded by a judge trial, 1.4 percent by jury. Statewide, 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases were terminated by a judge trial, 1.8 percent by jury trial. Four percent of the 2,549 criminal cases concluded ended in jury trials; 42.1 percent ended in judge trials. Statewide, the figures were five and 25 percent, respectively. Nearly 70 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing compared to 62 percent statewide. About 87 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months, compared to 79.5 percent statewide. The number of juries impaneled in 1988 dropped 22.2 percent, from 171 in 1987 to 133 juries in 1988.

In general district court, 131,931 new cases were filed in 1988. This represents a 7.5 percent increase over 1987. The greatest increase appeared among criminal cases, which took up 16 percent of the docket and increased 15.1 percent to 21,325 cases in 1988. Criminal cases increased in all localities except Westmoreland County, where a 10.3 percent decline was reported. Westmoreland County actually experienced a decline of 12.7 percent in the total number of general district cases filed. More than half (52 percent) of the district docket was traffic cases, which increased 5.2 percent, to 68,893 cases. Civil cases made up the remaining 32 percent of the caseload. The number of civil cases increased 7.8 percent, to 41,713 cases. The average caseload in general district court was the fourth highest in the state, at 32,983 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload also ranked fourth in the state, at 5,331 cases per judge. The statewide average criminal caseload was 4,136 cases per judge. The average civil and traffic caseloads in the Fifteenth ranked sixth and seventh, respectively. At 10,428 civil cases per judge and 17,223 traffic cases per judge, they surpassed the statewide average caseloads of 7,836 cases per judge and 13,757 cases per judge, respectively. Just over 124,000 hearings were held in the Fifteenth in 1988, a 10.9 percent increase over 1987.

There was a 20 percent increase in the number of new juvenile and domestic relations cases filed. Spotsylvania County reported a 40.1 percent increase in juvenile and domestic relations cases. In Lancaster County, the total number of cases declined 8.4 percent. Juvenile cases totaling 8,426 and domestic relations cases totaling 5,256 combined for a total new caseload in the Fifteenth of 13,682, and an average caseload that ranked ninth in the state. The average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 4,561 cases per judge, almost 700 cases higher than the state average of 3,895 cases per judge. The juvenile average caseload (2,809 cases per judge) and domestic relations average caseload (1,752 cases per judge) also ranked ninth in the state, surpassing the state averages of 2,442 juvenile and 1,453 domestic relations cases per judge. Sixty-two percent of the cases on the docket were juvenile cases; thirty-eight percent were domestic relations cases.

The two dozen magistrates of the Fifteenth recorded 38,108 activity hours, 40,2266 transactions, and 33,440 processes issued. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 85.7 percent, resulted in 19,089 processes issued. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 78.7 percent. Bond hearings resulted in 12,353 processed issued. Thirty-six civil warrants were issued; 1,962 other processes were issued.

Seventeenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Seventeenth Judicial Circuit serves the county of Arlington and the city of Falls Church. Falls Church was included in the circuit's jurisdiction on January 1, 1988. According to the 1980 Census, the population of the district was 162,114 residents, including 26,777 juveniles. By 1990, the total population of the area is projected to climb to 166,000. The juvenile population is expected to decline to 23,100.

Paul F. Sheridan, William L. Winston, Thomas R. Monroe, and Benjamin N. A. Kendrick served the Seventeenth Circuit Court in 1988. On the general district court bench were: Francis Everett Thomas, Jr., Joseph C. Gwaltney, and Eleanor S. Dobson. Andrew B. Ferrari and Frank J. Ceseri served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The Seventeenth District used 89.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This averages to 18 days per judge, below the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

There were 5,690 commenced cases in the Seventeenth, a 39.6 percent rise over 1987. Almost 3,000 of these were civil cases; 2,691 were criminal cases. These groups rose 31.7 percent and 49.6 percent, respectively. The number of concluded cases rose 35.7 percent, to 4,612. Law cases were 30 percent of the caseload, equity cases were 23 percent, felony cases, 43 percent, and misdemeanor, 5 percent. The state distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge ranked sixteenth in the state, at 1,423. This was below both the state average (1,452 cases per judge) and the urban average (1,527 cases per judge). The civil caseload of 750 and the criminal caseload of 673 cases per judge, also ranked below the state average for circuits in Virginia. Among civil cases that were concluded, 15.6 percent ended in a judge trial, and 1.9 percent ended by jury trial. About 58 percent were concluded within 12 months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Among concluded criminal cases, 16.4 percent were ended by judge trial, 7.1 percent by jury. Just over 65 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. This is lower than the state total of 79.5 percent of criminal cases concluded in five months. One hundred eighty-nine juries were impaneled in 1988, a 10.5 percent increase over 1987.

In the general district court, 105,277 new cases were recorded: 12 percent of which were criminal, 75 percent traffic, and 13 percent civil. Statewide, the distribution of new general district court cases was: 16 percent criminal, 53 percent traffic, and 30 percent civil. Total new cases increased almost 12 percent in 1988. Criminal cases jumped 26.5 percent, traffic cases increased 10 percent, while new civil cases rose 9.4 percent. The judges of the Seventeenth District averaged 35,042 cases each in 1988, the 2nd highest average among the 32 districts. The average caseload of traffic cases in the Seventeenth ranked first in the state, at 26,354 cases per judge. The state average was 13,757; the urban average was 14,852. The average criminal caseload of 4,110 ranked sixteenth in the state. However, the average civil caseload (4,629 cases per judge) ranked twenty-seventh.

There were 4,669 new cases in juvenile and domestic relations court: a 29.9 percent rise over 1987. Eighty percent (3,723) of these new cases were juvenile cases; 946 were domestic relations cases. The statewide distribution was 63 percent juvenile, 37 percent domestic relations. Despite the lower than average proportion of cases made up by domestic relations cases, domestic relations cases in the Seventeenth rose 48.5 percent in 1988. Juvenile cases rose 25.9 percent. The average domestic relations caseload of 473 was the lowest in the state. The average juvenile caseload of 1,862 ranked twenty-fifth.

Nine magistrates logged 11,583 activity hours in 1988, recording 24,136 transactions and issuing 24,119 processes. One civil warrant was issued, 910 miscellaneous processes were issued. Probable cause hearings and bond hearings resulted in about the same number of processes: 11,682 and 11,526, respectively. The Seventeenth had an issuance rate close to 100 percent after probable cause hearings. In only five probable cause hearings was a process not issued. All bond hearings in the Seventeenth resulted in the issuance of a process. These issuance rates are well above the state totals of 87.2 percent issuance after probable cause hearings, and 61.8 percent after bond hearings. The number of transactions and the number of processes issued increased 13 percent from 1987.

Eighteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Eighteenth Judicial Circuit serves the city of Alexandria. According to the 1980 Census, there were 103,217 residents in the area. Of this population, 18,938 were juveniles. While the total population is expected to increase 6.3 percent to 109,700 by 1990, the juvenile population is expected to decline 9.4 percent, to 17,157.

The Eighteenth Circuit Court is served by Donald Hall Kent, Donald M. Haddock, and Alfred D. Swersky. Robert T. S. Colby and D. F. O'Flaherty serve the general district court. Joseph L. Peters served the juvenile and domestic relations court in 1988, but retired January 1, 1989. He was replaced by Stephen W. Rideout. The judges of the district court used 95.2 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average usage of 31.7 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the circuit court rose 2.5 percent in 1988, to reach 3,825 cases. The number of concluded cases rose 33.1 percent, while pending cases dropped 25.7 percent, to 2,510. Civil cases made up 2,164 of the commenced cases; criminal cases made up the remaining 1,661. The caseload distribution was: 25 percent law, 31 percent equity, 31 percent felony, and 12 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload among the circuit court judges was 1,275. This was below the state average caseload per judge of 1,452 and the urban average caseload of 1,527. The average civil caseload (721 cases per judge) and the average criminal caseload (554 cases per judge) were also below state and urban averages. Of the 2,815 civil cases that were concluded in 1988, just over six percent were concluded by a judge trial; 1.6 percent were concluded by jury. Of the 1,880 concluded criminal cases, 174. percent were terminated by a judge trial, 4.2 percent by jury. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded by a judge trial, while 1.8 percent were terminated in a jury trial. Of criminal cases statewide, 25 percent were concluded by judge trial, five percent by jury trial. About sixty percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months. Just over 91 percent of criminal cases were concluded within 5 months. The number of juries impaneled in 1988 was 12.1 percent lower than in 1987.

New cases in the general district court rose 5.5 percent, to 45,256 cases in 1988. The largest increase came in criminal cases, which made up 17 percent of the caseload, and, at 7,681 cases, showed a 20.7 percent increase over 1987. Traffic cases rose 4.2 percent, to 22,877. Traffic cases were 51 percent of the caseload. Civil cases, 32 percent of the caseload, rose less than one percent, to 14,698. The number of hearings rose four percent, to 51,283. The average general district caseload in the Eighteenth District was 22,628 new cases per judge, below both the state average (25,729 cases per judge) and the average for judges in urban districts (28,892 cases per judge). The caseload average for each type of case (criminal, traffic, and civil) was below the statewide average.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, juvenile cases rose 15.5 percent, to 2,365, while domestic relations cases rose 30.1 percent, to 2,051. The resulting total of 4,416 new cases represents a 21.9 percent increase over 1987. The average domestic relations caseload ranked fourth in the state. The average caseload of 2,051 domestic relations cases per judge was well above the state average of 1,453 and the urban average of 1,500. The average juvenile caseload of 2,365 ranked twelfth in the state and was below the state and urban average.

The seven magistrates of the Eighteenth issued 204,847 processes in 8,917 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings, in which there was a 95.9 percent issuance rate, accounted for 13,821 of issued processes. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 56.5 percent, resulted in 6,218 processes issued. Twenty-one civil warrants were issued. Other processes accounted for the remaining 781. The number of transactions increased by almost 30 percent while the number of processes issued jumped almost 29 percent over 1987.

Nineteenth Judicial Circuit and District

The Nineteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Fairfax County and the city of Fairfax. Until January 1, 1988, the Nineteenth Circuit also served the city of Falls Church. The 1980 Census recorded 625,806 residents in this area, including 182,215 juveniles. The Office of Planning and Budget projects that, while the total population will increase by 22.7 percent to 768,000 in 1990, the juvenile population will increase only 0.2 percent, to 182,582.

There are 13 authorized judgeships in the Nineteenth Circuit. These judgeships were served in 1988 by: F. Bruce Bach, Lewis H. Griffith, Richard J. Jamborsky, Thomas J. Middleton, Jr., Jack B. Stevens, J. Howe Brown, Jr., William G. Plummer, Johanna L. Fitzpatrick, Quinlan H. Hancock, Thomas A. Fortkort, and Michael P. McWeeny, who was elected from the district bench March 1, 1988. Rosemarie P. Annunziata and Thomas S. Kenny will join the circuit bench July 1, 1989. Serving the general district bench in 1988 were: Richard T. Horan, Robert M. Hurst, Stewart P. Davis, Frank B. Perry III, Thomas J. Rothrock, J. Conrad Waters, Jr., Marcus D. Williams, Barbara L. Kimble, and Donald C. McDonough. Judge Kimble joined the bench April 1,1988; Judge McDonough joined July 1, 1988. Jane Pritchard Delbridge, Arnold B. Kassabian, Michael J. Valentine, Gaylord L. Finch, Jr., and James W. Fourqurean served the juvenile and domestic relations bench in 1988. The judges of the Nineteenth District used 459.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 32.8 was almost 8 days greater than the state average of 25.3 days.

Seventeen thousand six hundred eighty-eight (17,688) cases commenced in the Nineteenth Circuit, an increase of 5.7 percent over 1987. Nearly 17,900 cases were concluded, a 19.6. Percent increase over 1987, and pending cases totaled 17,180: a decrease of 1.2 percent. The caseload distribution in the Nineteenth was: 31 percent law, 34 percent equity, 19 percent felony, and 17 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload was the fourth highest in the state, at 1,608 cases per judge. The statewide average caseload was 1,452 cases per judge. The average caseload among urban circuits was 1,527 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was the highest in the state, at 1,041 cases per judge. The average civil caseload among urban circuits was 847 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-seventh statewide and, at 567 cases per judge, was below the state average criminal caseload of 677 cases per judge. Almost 12 percent of the concluded civil cases were ended by judge trial, while almost 2 percent were ended by jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, 1.8 percent in jury trials. Of the 5,496 concluded criminal cases, 40.7 percent were terminated by judge trial, 7.4 percent in jury trial. Statewide, the figures were 25 and five percent, respectively. Just over half (52.6 percent) of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, 83.2 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time periods. Five hundred four juries were impaneled in 1988: eight less than in 1987.

New cases filed in general district court rose 8.9 percent, to 288,723 cases in 1988. The average general district caseload of 32,080 cases per judge ranked sixth in the state, surpassing the state average caseload of 25,729 cases per judge and the urban average caseload of 28,847 cases per judge. The greatest increase in new cases came among traffic cases. At 223,006, new traffic cases comprised 77 percent of the docket and registered a 10.5 percent increase over 1987. The average traffic caseload 24,778 cases per judge was the second highest in the state, almost 10,000 cases higher than the urban average traffic caseload. Criminal cases (nine percent of the docket) increased 7.5 percent, to 24,501 cases. The average criminal caseload was 2,722 cases per judge, and ranked twenty-eighth statewide. Civil cases increased only 1.6 percent, to 41,216 cases. The average civil caseload also ranked twenty-eighth, at 4,580 cases per judge. The state average caseloads for criminal and civil cases were 4,136 cases per judge and 7,836 case per judge, respectively. Hearings increased 9.2 percent in the Nineteenth District, to 253,986.

New cases totaling 24,438 were filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1988. This represents a 2.7 percent increase over 1987. The average caseload of 4,888 cases per judge ranked fifth in the state, more than 500 cases higher than the urban average caseload of 4,328 cases per judge. Juvenile cases, which comprised eighty percent of the docket, rose 2.8 percent, to 19,555 cases. The average juvenile caseload of 3,911 was the second highest in the state, well above the urban average juvenile caseload of 2,829 cases per judge. A 2.4 percent increase was recorded among domestic relations cases, of which 4,883 were filed inn 19898. The average domestic relations caseload of 977 was the second lowest in the state, nearly 500 cases lower than the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,453 cases per judge.

Thirty magistrates in the Nineteenth District recorded 45,064 activity hours, 95,812 transactions, and 69,993 processes issued. This was the highest number of processes issued in the state. Twentieth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twentieth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Fauquier,, Loudoun, and Rappahannock. According to the 1980 Census, there were 99,409 residents of this area, of which 31,228 were juveniles. The number of residents is expected to increase by 25.2 percent for a total population of 124,500 by 1990. The juvenile population is predicted to increase by 11.7 percent to 34,881.

Thomas D. Horne, James H. Chamblin, and William S. Robertson served the Twentieth Circuit Court in 1988. Archibald M. Aiken, Jr. and Charles B. Foley served the general district court in 1988. J. Allen Walker joined the general district bench on April 1, 1989, filing the new judgeship created by the General Assembly. The juvenile and domestic relations court was served by A. Burke Hertz and Jean Harrison Clements. The judges of the Twentieth District used 68.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This resulted in an average usage of 17.2 days per judge. Across the state, the average usage was 25.3 days per judge.

There were 3,555 cases commenced in the Twentieth Circuit in 1988. This represents a 4.7 percent increase over 1987, when 3,394 cases were commenced. Rappahannock County experienced a 43.3 percent increase in commenced cases. In Fauquier and Loudoun counties, the increases were less than ten percent. The number of commenced criminal cases dropped 6.9 percent, to 1,515 cases, despite a doubling of the criminal caseload in Rappahannock County. In Rappahannock, the number of criminal cases increased 145 percent. Equity and felony cases made up a slightly larger share of the caseload than in the statewide distribution. Statewide, the distribution of circuit cases was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. In the Twentieth, the distribution was: 22 percent law, 35 percent equity, 32 percent felony, and 11 percent misdemeanor. The average circuit caseload in the Twentieth was 1,185 cases per judge: 680 civil cases per judge, and 677 criminal cases per judge. These average caseloads ranked among the ten lowest in the state, and were below the statewide average caseloads of 1,452 circuit cases, 774 civil cases, and 677 criminal cases per judge. Nine percent of the 1,664 concluded civil cases were concluded by a judge trial. One percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases are concluded in a judge trial, 1.8 percent in jury trials. Almost 70 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Across the state, 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within one year. Among the 1,717 criminal cases that were concluded in the Twentieth last year, 14.2 percent terminated in judge trials, 11.8 percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 25 percent of criminal cases ended in judge trials, five percent in jury trials. Almost half of the concluded criminal cases were ended within five months of filing. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases are concluded within five months. One hundred two juries were impaneled in 1988, five less than in 1987.

In general district court, 54,923 new cases were filed, a 27.3 percent increase over 1987. The general district case increase was experienced in all localities, but ranged from a 6.4 percent increase in Fauquier County to a 37.9 percent increase in Loudoun County. The largest district increase came among traffic cases, which comprised 71 percent of the caseload. The number of new traffic cases jumped by more than one-third, to 39,043 new cases. Both Loudoun and Rappahannock Counties reported increases in traffic cases of nearly 50 percent. Civil cases, which comprised 20 percent of the district caseload, rose 17.4 percent, to 10,866 new cases. In Rappahannock County, civil cases dropped 25.2 percent. Criminal cases made up the remaining nine percent of the district caseload. Criminal cases showed only a 3.3 percent increase, to 5,014. In Rappahannock County, criminal cases fell 14.9 percent, while the number of criminal cases rose about five percent in both Fauquier and Loudoun counties. Hearings were up 18.5 percent, to 45,254 in 1988. With the large increase in traffic cases, the average traffic caseload per judge was the fifth highest in the state. At 19,522 traffic cases per judge, it far surpassed the average traffic caseload statewide, of 13,757 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Twentieth ranked nineteenth statewide, and the average criminal caseload ranked thirtieth among the thirty-two districts. At 5,433 civil cases per judge and 2,507 criminal cases per judge, these caseloads were below the state average caseloads of 7,836 civil cases and 4,136 criminal cases per judge. The average general district caseload ranked twelfth in the state, at 27,462 cases per judge. The state average general district caseload was 25,729 cases per judge.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, the number of new cases rose 23.8 percent. Fauquier County experienced the largest increase: 41.3 percent. The 4,320 new juvenile cases filed in the district represented a 32.6 percent increase in juvenile cases, while the 1,159 new domestic relations cases represented a 14.5 percent increase. The total of 5,479 new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court resulted in an average caseload of 2,740 cases per judge. This average caseload ranked thirtieth in the state, well below the state average juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 3,895 cases per judge. The juvenile and domestic relations caseload in the twentieth was also below the average caseload among rural districts: 3,476 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 2,160 cases per judge ranked eighteenth in the state, between the rural average juvenile caseload of 2,069 cases per judge and the state average juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload was 580 cases per judge, thirty-first in the state. Seventy-nine percent of the cases in juvenile and domestic relations court were juvenile cases; 21 percent were domestic relations cases.

The ten magistrates of the Twentieth District recorded 10,167 activity hours, 13,668 transactions, and 10,320 processes issued. The great majority of the processes issued (7,073) were issued after probable cause hearings; 3,086 were issued after bond hearings, three civil warrants were issued, and 158 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings in the Twentieth had an 85.3 percent issuance rate, below the statewide issuance rate of 87.2 percent. Bond hearings in the Twentieth had a 59.6 percent issuance rate, compared to 61.8 percent statewide.

Twenty-first Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Henry and Patrick and the city of Martinsville are served by the Twenty-first Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 93,450 residents of which 26,573 were juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase by 2.5 percent while the juvenile population is projected to decline by 14 percent down to 22,848.

Frank I. Richardson, Jr. and Kenneth M. Covington served the Twenty-first Circuit Court in 1988. J. Frank Greenwalt, Jr. and Charles M. Stone served the general district courts, and the juvenile and domestic relations court was served by Junius P. Warren. The judges of the Twenty-first District used 39.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average usage of 13.3 days per judge was well below the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases in the Twenty-first Circuit dropped by 15.8 percent, to 2,828 cases. However, the number of commenced cases rose 22.7 percent in Patrick County. The number of civil cases in the circuit dropped about three percent, to 1,134, while the number of criminal cases dropped 22.7 percent, to 1,694 cases. In Patrick County, the number of criminal cases dropped 23.8 percent, but the number of civil cases rose 7.5 percent. The number of pending cases in the circuit fell 5.9 percent, to 2,287 pending cases. The number of concluded cases stayed about the same (-0.4 percent), at 2,972 cases. The average criminal caseload in the Twenty-first was the fourth highest in the state, at 847 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload in the state was 677 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was twenty-ninth in the state, at 567 cases per judge. The state average civil caseload was 774 cases per judge. Eleven hundred civil cases were concluded in the Twenty-first: 4.5 percent by judge trial, 3.3 percent by jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases ended in a judge trial, 1.8 percent in a jury trial. In the Twenty-first Circuit, 71.7 percent of concluded civil cases were concluded within twelve months of filing. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within that time. Of the 1,872 criminal cases that were concluded, 16.6 percent terminated in a judge trial, 3.4 percent in a trial with jury. Statewide, 25 percent of criminal cases terminated in a judge trial, five percent ended in a jury trial. In the Twenty-first, 86.6 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases are concluded within five months. The number of juries impaneled in the Twenty-first circuit rose sharply in 1988; up 43.3 percent, to 86 juries impaneled.

In general district court, 31,039 new cases were filed. This represents a six percent increase over 1987. The number of criminal cases in the district fell 1.1 percent to 5,093. In Patrick County, criminal cases rose 6.5 percent. The number of civil cases rose only slightly (0.3 percent), to 14,767. In Patrick County, civil cases jumped 24.6 percent. However, traffic cases, which comprised 36 percent of the district caseload, rose 19 percent, to 11,184 new cases. Martinsville experienced the greatest increase: traffic cases rose 29.6 percent. Civil cases comprised 47 percent of the district caseload, criminal cases, 17 percent. The average civil caseload ranked thirteenth in the state. At 7,381 civil cases per judge, it fell between the average civil caseload among rural districts (5,644 cases per judge) and the average civil caseload statewide (7,836 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload of 2,574 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth in the state, below the average criminal caseload for rural districts (3,879 cases per judge). The average traffic caseload ranked thirty-first in the state, at 5,592 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload in rural districts was 12,431 cases per judge. The total average caseload of all general district cases was 15,520 cases per judge in the Twenty-first District. This average caseload ranked twenty-ninth in the state. The average general district caseload statewide was 25,729 cases per judge; among rural districts 21,955 cases per judge. The number of hearings held in the Twenty-first District increased 15.1 percent, to 28,707 hearings.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court increased 20.5 percent, to 5,444 new cases filed. The cases were almost evenly split (52/48 percent) between juvenile cases and domestic relations cases. Juvenile cases showed a 26.3 percent increase, to 2,861 cases, domestic relations cases were up 14.6 percent, to 2,583 cases. Patrick County reported a slight decline (-0.9 percent) in the number of domestic relations cases. Because there was only one judge in the Twenty-first juvenile and domestic relations court, the average caseload in juvenile and domestic relations court was the second highest in the state, at 5,444 cases per judge. The statewide average caseload was only 3,895 cases per judge. Judge Warren presided over 2,861 juvenile cases and 2,583 domestic relations cases. Statewide, these caseload averages were 2,442 juvenile cases per judge and 1,453 domestic relations cases per judge.

There were eight magistrates serving the Twenty-first District in 1988. These magistrates recorded 11,035 activity hours, completed 21,702 transactions, and issued 18,735 processes. Probable cause hearings, with a 90 percent issuance rate, resulted in 6,800 processes issued. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 64 percent, resulting in 3,837 processes issued. Statewide, issuance rates were 87.2 percent in probable cause hearings, 61.8 percent in bond hearings. Civil warrants comprised another 4,254 of the processes issued.

Twenty-second Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-second judicial circuit serves the counties of Pittsylvania and Franklin and the city of Danville. The 1980 Census reported a population of 147,529 residents, including 40,000 juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 4 percent, while the juvenile population is projected to decline by 8.1 percent to 36,746.

Beverly A. Davis III, Samuel M. Hairston and James F. Ingram served the Twenty-second Circuit Court in 1988. T. Ryland Dodson and William N. Alexander II served the general district court. Spiros B. Skenderis and Coleman B. Yeatts, Jr. served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Twenty-second District used 55.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 13.9 days per judge. Statewide, substitutes were used an average of 25.3 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the Twenty-second Circuit rose seven percent in 1988, to 4,809 cases. In Pittsylvania County, however, the number of commenced cases dropped 8.8 percent. The circuit average caseload of 1,603 cases per judge ranked fifth in the state, and was higher than the statewide average circuit caseload of 1,452 cases per judge. One quarter of the cases were equity cases, 16 percent were law cases, 37 percent were felony cases, and 22 percent were misdemeanor cases. Statewide, the distribution of cases ran: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. Civil cases rose 12.4 percent, to a total of 1,979 cases in 1988. Pittsylvania County reported a 10.4 percent drop in civil cases. The average civil caseload in the circuit was 660 cases per judge. The average civil caseload statewide was 774 cases per judge, or 676 cases per judge among rural circuits in the state. Criminal cases in the Twenty-second rose 3.5 percent, to 2,830 cases. This rise was experienced only in the City of Danville, where criminal cases rose 30.7 percent. In Franklin County, criminal cases dropped 17.5 percent, and in Pittsylvania County, criminal cases dropped 32 percent. The resulting average circuit caseload of 943 criminal cases per judge ranked third highest in the state, well above the state average juvenile caseload of 677 criminal cases per judge. A total of 4,532 cases were concluded in the Twenty-second in 1988: 1,908 civil cases and 2,624 criminal cases. Eleven fewer cases were concluded in 1988 than in 1987. One percent of the concluded civil cases and 2.4 percent of concluded criminal cases were concluded by jury trial. Statewide, 1.8 percent of civil cases and five percent of criminal cases were concluded by jury trials. Trials by judges ended 22.3 percent of civil cases and 42.4 percent of criminal cases. Across the state, 12.6 percent of civil cases and 25 percent of criminal cases ended in this manner. More than 85 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing, compared to 62 percent statewide. Almost 94 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within that period. Sixty-two juries were impaneled in 1988: 18 fewer than in 1987.

In general district court, 50,913 new cases were filed: 11,196 criminal cases, 23,754 traffic cases and 15,963 civil cases. Criminal cases showed a 14 percent increase over 1987, traffic cases showed a 17 percent increase, and civil cases rose eighteen percent over 1987. As a result, the total caseload in the Twenty-second General District Court rose 16.6 percent in 1988. In Pittsylvania County, the general district caseload dropped slightly (-0.9 percent). The average district caseload of 25,457 cases per judge ranked sixteenth in the state. The average criminal caseload, at 5,598 cases per judge, was the third highest in the state, more than 1,000 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge, and almost 2,000 cases higher than the average criminal caseload among rural districts: 3,879 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload (11,877 cases per judge) ranked twentieth statewide, below the state (13,757 cases per judge) and rural (12,431 cases per judge) average traffic caseloads. The average civil caseload was the tenth highest in the state. At 7,982 civil cases per judge, it was slightly higher than the state average civil caseload of 7,836 cases per judge. Hearings rose 18.8 percent in 1988, to 49,807.

An 11.6 percent rise in juvenile cases and a 25.4 percent rise in domestic cases resulted in a total of 8,100 new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1988. Franklin County and the City of Danville recorded increases in juvenile and domestic relations cases of 28.7 percent and 29.7 percent, respectively. In Pittsylvania County, juvenile and domestic relations cases were down 0.4 percent. The district caseload was almost evenly split between juvenile and domestic relations cases. The 4,2339 juvenile cases resulted in an average juvenile caseload of 2,120 cases per judge: twentieth in the state, and below the state average juvenile caseload of 2,442 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload was higher than the average juvenile caseload among rural districts: 2,069 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload was the sixth highest in the state, almost 500 cases higher than the state average domestic relations caseload (1,453 cases per judge).

Twelve magistrates issued 29,735 processes in 19,115 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings resulted in 11,955 processes issued, bond hearings resulted in 7,311 processes issued. Nearly 10,000 (9,740) civil warrants were issued. Probable cause hearings had an issuance rate of 86.2 percent; 51.6 percent of bond hearings resulted in a process issued. Statewide, these issuance rates were 87.2 percent and 61.8 percent, respectively.

Twenty-third Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-third Judicial Circuit includes the city of Roanoke, the county of Roanoke, and the city of Salem. According to the 1980 Census, the population was 197,123 including 49,895 juveniles. The number of juveniles in the area is projected to decrease to 46,904 by 1990, while the total population is expected to rise by 4.5 percent, to 205,904.

Clifford R. Weckstein, Kenneth E. Trabue, Roy B. Willett, Jack B. Coulter, and G. O. Clemens served the Twenty-third Circuit in 1988. Judge Coulter retired March 1, 1989. Diane McQ. Strickland joined the bench on March 1, 1989, after her election from the general district court. Serving the general district court were George W. Harris, Julian H. Raney, Jr., Edward S. Kidd, Jr., Diane McQ. Strickland, and John L. Apostolou. Frederick L. Hoback, Jr., Philip Trompeter and James W. Flippin served the juvenile and domestic relations court. Judge Flippen died June 23, 1988 and was replaced by Joseph M. Clarke II. Substitute and retired, recalled judges were used for a total of 159.2 days in 1988; an average of 19.9 days per judge. Statewide, the average usage of substitute and retired, recalled judges was 25.3 days per judge.

The number of commenced cases dropped one percent in 1988, to 7,484. The drop was due to a 6.4 percent decline in commenced criminal cases; civil cases rose 4.8 percent. Locally, the drop in circuit cases was experienced only in Roanoke City, which comprised 56.4 percent of the circuit's caseload and recorded a 3.6 percent drop in total cases. The City of Salem recorded a five percent rise in total cases. In Roanoke County, civil cases fell 2.8 percent, while criminal cases rose 10.4 percent. Total circuit cases in Roanoke County increased 1.5 percent. The 1988 average circuit caseload per judge was 1,497 cases. This was the twelfth highest caseload in the state, and was higher than the average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload (733 cases per judge) ranked eighth in the state, and the average civil caseload (764 cases per judge) ranked ninth. Statewide, the average criminal caseloads were 677 criminal cases per judge and 774 civil cases per judge. Among urban circuits, the average caseloads were 680 criminal and 847 civil cases per judge. The caseload distribution in the Twenty-third Circuit ran: 22 percent law, 30 percent equity, 35 percent felony, and 14 percent in misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. There was a 4.7 percent increase in the number of concluded cases, and a 3.6 percent decrease in the number of pending cases. Almost two percent of the 3,966 civil cases that were concluded in 1988 were concluded by jury trial. Judge trials concluded 32.6 percent of civil cases. Across the state, 1.8 percent of civil cases ended in jury trials, 12.6 percent in judge trials, and 62 percent within 12 months of filing. In the Twenty-third circuit, 61.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within a year of filing. Almost 43 percent of the 3,754 concluded criminal cases were terminated in judge trials; 1.7 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, only five percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, while 25 percent ended in judge trials. Within five months of filing 83.5 percent of criminal cases in the Twenty-third Circuit were concluded. The state total was 79.5 percent of criminal cases concluded within five months. There was a 15.2 percent decline in the number of juries impaneled. One hundred twelve juries were impaneled in 1988; 20 less than in 1987.

The greatest increase in the general district caseload occurred among civil cases, which increased 24.1 percent, to 38,102 cases. Traffic cases, which comprised 44 percent of the caseload, rose 9.4 percent, to 47,196. The number of criminal cases remained about the same, at 22,163 cases in 1988. Criminal cases comprised 21 percent of the caseload. The resulting total general district caseload of 107,461 cases in 1988 represented a 12 percent increase over 1987. Roanoke County experienced a 15.4 percent increase in general district cases, Roanoke City reported a 12.1 percent increase, and the City of Salem experienced a 1.5 percent increase in general district cases. The average caseload of 21,492 cases per judge was ranked twenty-second in the state, more than 3,000 cases below the state average caseload of 25,729 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload ranked twenty-fourth, at 9,439 cases per judge, while the average criminal and civil caseload each ranked twelfth, at 4,433 criminal and 7,620 civil cases per judge. The state average caseloads were: 13,757 traffic, 4,136 criminal, and 7,836 civil cases per judge. The number of hearings in the Twenty-third rose 8.3 percent, to 111,107.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, 12,248 new cases were filed: 8,324 juvenile cases and 3,924 domestic relations cases. These numbers represented a 6.5 percent drop in total caseload, a 7.6 percent drop among juvenile cases, and a 4.1 percent drop among domestic relations cases. However, in Roanoke County, juvenile cases rose 5.4 percent, domestic relations cases rose 49.8 percent, for a total caseload increase of 14.6 percent. The total average caseload ranked thirteenth in the state, at 4,083 cases per judge. The statewide average was 3,895 cases per judge. The average among urban districts was 4,328 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload ranked tenth in the state, and, at 2,775 cases per judge, also fell between the state and urban average juvenile caseloads, at 2,442 cases per judge and 2,829 cases per judge. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,308 cases per judge ranked twentieth in the state. Statewide, the average domestic relations caseload was 1,453 case per judge.

Over 38,000 processes were issued in the Twenty-third, by 12 magistrates, in 20,660 recorded activity hours. An 88 percent issuance rate among probable cause hearing resulted in 21,387 processes issued. Bond hearings, with a 55.6 percent issuance rate, resulted in 14,458 processes issued. Nineteen civil warrants were issued, and 2,358 other processes were used.

Twenty-fourth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-fourth Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson and the cities of Bedford and Lynchburg. The 1980 Census reported a population in this area of 194,411 residents, including 52,538 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase by 10.5 percent to 214,800, while the juvenile population is expected to decrease to 51,825.

The Twenty-fourth Circuit Court was served in 1988 by Samuel Johnston, Jr., Robert C. Goad, William W. Sweeney, and Richard S. Miller. Mosby G. Perrow III will take the bench July 1, 1989, filling a judgeship created by the 1989 General Assembly. The general district courts of the Twenty-fourth were served by James S. Farmer, Jesse C. Crumbley, III, Coy M. Kiser, Jr., and Paul Whitehead, Jr. Serving the juvenile and domestic relations bench were: Lawrence Janow, W. Raymond Minnix, and Dale H. Harris. The judges of the Twenty-fourth used 156.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 22.4 days per judge. Statewide, substitutes were used for an average of 25.3 days per judge.

There were 6,095 cases commenced in the Twenty-fourth Circuit in 1988. This represents a 4.6 percent increase over 1987, when 5,828 cases were commenced. In Amherst County, the number of commenced cases fell 1.5 percent. The number of civil cases rose 8.1 percent in 1988, to 2,964 cases commenced. The number of civil cases increased in all localities except Nelson County, where civil cases fell by seven percent. The number of criminal cases in the circuit increased only 1.4 percent, to 3,131 cases. In Amherst and Bedford counties, the number of criminal cases fell 16.9 percent and 5.2 percent, respectively. There was a greater proportion of felony cases in the Twenty-fourth than statewide. In the Twenty-fourth, 36 percent of the caseload was felony cases, compared with 30 percent statewide. The average caseload per judge of 1,524 cases ranked ninth among thirty-one circuits in the state. The average caseload was nearly 100 cases higher than the average caseload statewide of 1,452 cases per judge. The average caseload of criminal cases was proportionately even higher. At 783 cases per judge, it ranked sixth in the state, and was more than 100 cases higher than the state average criminal caseload of 677 cases per judge. The average civil caseload ranked twelfth in the state, at 741 cases per judge. This caseload was below the state average civil caseload of 774 cases per judge, but was higher than the average civil caseload among rural circuits: 676 cases per judge. The number of concluded cases rose 5.9 percent, to 5,660 in 1988. Almost 23 percent of the 2,635 concluded civil cases ended in a judge trial. This rate is almost double the state percentage of civil cases ending in judge trials (12.6 percent). Jury trials concluded 2.8 percent of civil cases, compared to 1.8 percent statewide. Judge trials concluded 35.5 percent of the 3,025 concluded criminal cases. This rate is also higher than the statewide rate of 25 percent of criminal cases concluding in judge trials. Jury trials concluded 5.3 percent of criminal cases in the Twenty-fourth, compared to five percent of criminal cases statewide. Nearly 80 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months. Over 82 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these time frames. One hundred seventy juries were impaneled in 1988: the same number as in 1987.

In general district court, 65,688 new cases were filed. This represents a 6.4 percent increase over 1987. Amerst and Campbell counties experienced declines in general district case of 0.4 percent and 5.7 percent, respectively. There was little change (+0.5 percent) in the number of criminal cases in the district, which comprised 19 percent (12,723 cases) of the caseload. Locally, changes in the criminal caseload ranged from a 14.6 percent decline in Nelson County to a nine percent increase in Campbell County. Traffic cases, of which there were 33,620, comprised just over half of the caseload, and showed a 6.5 percent increase over 1987. Amherst and Campbell counties recorded decreases in the number of traffic cases (5.7 percent and 14.3 percent, respectively). The largest increase in new cases occurred among civil cases. Civil cases rose 10.7 percent, to 19,345 new cases. This represents 30 percent of the general district caseload. Every locality in the district reported an increase in civil caseload. The largest increase (30.9 percent) was recorded in Bedford County. The average caseload in the Twenty-fourth district was 18,247 cases per judge. This caseload ranked twenty-eighth in the state, and was lower than both the state average caseload of 25,729 cases and the rural average caseload of 21,955 cases. The average criminal caseload ranked twenty-second statewide, at 3,534 case per judge. The average traffic caseload of 9,339 cases per judge ranked twenty-fifth statewide. The average civil caseload ranked twenty-first, at 5,374 cases per judge. These average caseloads were all below the statewide caseload averages, and the rural state averages of: 3,879 criminal cases, 12,431 traffic cases, and 5,644 civil cases per judge. Hearings increased 6.6 percent, to 68,881 in 1988.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose 19.4 percent, to 11,252 new cases filed: 6,470 juvenile cases and 4,782 domestic relations cases. The City of Lynchburg recorded the largest increase (39.4 percent), while Nelson County recorded a 14.1 percent decrease in juvenile and domestic relations cases. The district experienced a 21.7 percent increase among juvenile cases and a 16.5 percent increase among domestic relations cases. Both the total average caseload (3,751 cases per judge) and the average juvenile caseload (2,157 cases per judge) ranked nineteenth in the state, between the state averages of 3,895 and 2,442 cases, respectively, and the rural averages of 3,476 and 2,069 cases, respectively. The average domestic relations caseload of 1,594 cases per judge ranked seventeenth in the state, more than 100 cases higher than the state average domestic relations caseload of 1,453 cases per judge.

The seventeen magistrates of the Twenty-fourth District recorded 28,015 activity hours, 31,543 transactions, and 23,429 processes issued in 1988. Probable cause hearings resulted in more than half (14,093) of the processes issued. Probable cause hearings had a 79.4 percent issuance rate. Bond hearings had an issuance rate of 60.3 percent, and resulted in 6,665 of the issued processes. Eight civil warrants were issued.

Twenty-fifth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty fifth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland and Rockbridge and the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, Staunton, and Waynesboro. The 1980 Census recorded a population of 187,295 residents in this region, of which 49,309 were juveniles. While the total population is projected to increase by 4.1 percent by 1990, the juvenile population is expected to decline by 8.3 percent during the same period.

The Twenty-fifth Circuit Court was served in 1988 by Rudolph Bumgardner, III, Thomas H. Wood, Duncan M. Byrd, Jr., and George E. Honts, III. Serving on the general district bench were: Joseph E. Hess, William E. Carson, Sr., Talmage N. Cooley, Elmer C. Westerman, Jr., and Louis K. Campbell. Judge Westerman retired from the bench July 1, 1988, and was replaced by Judge Campbell. Robert C. Culpepper, John B. Curry, II, and Harrison May served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The judges of the Twenty-fifth District used 169.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 24.2 days per judge. Statewide, an average of 25.3 days per judge was used for substitutes.

While the total number of commenced cases increased only 1.5 percent in 1988, the number of commenced civil cases increased 5.2 percent. However, the number of commenced criminal cases decreased 1.8 percent. Locally, changes in the number of commenced circuit cases ranged from a 35.4 percent increase in Bath County to a 14 percent decrease in Rockbridge County. The 1988 totals were: 2,485 civil cases and 2,532 criminal cases commenced. Twenty percent of the total caseload was comprised of misdemeanor cases: 19 percent were law cases, 31 percent were equity cases, and 31 percent were felony cases. Across the state, cases in circuit court were distributed: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge in the Twenty-fifth Circuit was 1,254 cases. This caseload average ranked twenty-sixth in the state, and was lower than both the statewide average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge and the average caseload among rural circuits of 1,349 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 621 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh in the state; the average criminal caseload ranked twenty-first, at 633 cases per judge. The average caseloads in rural circuits were 676 civil cases and 673 criminal cases per judge. The number of concluded cases dropped 8.5 percent in 1988, to 5,085 cases. Of the 2,587 concluded civil cases, 13.5 percent were terminated in a judge trial and 1.5 percent ended in a jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, and 1.8 percent were ended in jury trials. In the Twenty-fifth Circuit, 66.2 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within one year. Four percent of the 2,498 concluded criminal cases terminated in jury trials, compared with five percent statewide. Almost 34 percent of criminal cases were ended in judge trials, compared to 25 percent statewide. Within five months, 78.1 percent of criminal cases were concluded in the Twenty-fifth. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded in that time. Ninety-one juries were impaneled in 1988, an 18.2 percent increase over 1987.

In general district court, 80,504 new cases were filed. This represents a 16.1 percent increase over 1987. However, the City of Clifton Forge recorded a 7.1 percent decline in the number of new cases filed. Criminal cases comprised 17 percent of thee district caseload, and increased 11.2 percent, to 13,731 cases. Traffic cases, 65 percent of the caseload, showed an 18.4 percent increase, to 52,627 cases. Civil cases increased 12.6 percent, to 14,146 new cases: 18 percent of the total caseload. The average caseload per judge of 18,296 cases per judge ranked twenty-seventh among the thirty-two districts. The statewide average caseload per judge was 25,729 cases. Among rural districts, the average caseload per judge was 21,955 cases. The average criminal caseload (3,121 cases per judge) ranked twenty-fifth in the state. The average criminal caseload among rural districts was 3,879 cases per judge. The Twenty-fifth District ranked nineteenth in average traffic caseload, at 11,961 cases per judge. The state average traffic caseload was 13,757 cases per judge; the rural average traffic caseload was 12,431 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the district (3,215 cases per judge) ranked thirtieth statewide. The state and rural average civil caseloads were 7,836 and 5,644 cases per judge, respectively. Hearings rose 8.4 percent in 1988, 78,704.

The 6,008 new juvenile cases and 3,500 new domestic relations cases filed in 1988 resulted in a total juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 9,508 new cases, a 26.8 percent increase over 1987. Increases were recorded in all localities except Highland County, where juvenile and domestic cases fell 27.8 percent in 1988. The average district caseload per judge was 3,169 cases, 300 below the rural average of 3,476 cases. Although juvenile cases increased 31.5 percent in 1988, the average juvenile caseload ranked only twenty-second statewide, at 2,003 juvenile cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload among rural districts was 2,069 cases per judge. Domestic relations cases increased 19.6 percent in 1988, resulting in an average domestic relations caseload of 1,167 cases per judge. This average caseload ranked twenty-fourth in the state. The rural average domestic relations caseload was 1,407 cases per judge. Juvenile cases comprised 63 percent of the total caseload; domestic relations cases made up the remaining 37 percent of the caseload. This distribution was identical to the statewide distribution of juvenile and domestic relations cases.

The two dozen magistrates of the Twenty-fifth District issued 23,429 processes in 25,226 recorded activity hours. Probable cause hearings resulted in 14,479 processes issued, 5,504 processes were issued as a result of bond hearings, 1,448 civil warrants were issued, and 1,294 other processes were issued. The issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 82.2 percent. Among bond hearings the issuance rate was 56.5 percent. Statewide, 87.2 percent of probable cause hearings and 61.8 percent of bond hearings resulted in processes issued.

Twenty-sixth Judicial Circuit and District

The counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, and Warren and the cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester comprise the Twenty-sixth Circuit. The 1980 Census reported a population of 209,201 in the area, including 54,937 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase 13.2 percent, to 236,900. The juvenile population is projected to increase 0.8 percent, to 55,375.

Porter R. Graves, Jr., Joshua L. Robinson, Robert K. Woltz, and Perry W. Sarver served the Twenty-sixth Circuit Court in 1988. Judge Woltz will retire July 1,1989 and will be replaced by James L. Berry. John F. Ewell, John A. Paul, Norman DeV. Morrison, and David G. Simpson served on the general district bench. The juvenile and domestic relations courts were served by B. B. Bowers and Carle F. Germelman, Jr. Substitute and retired, recalled judges were used for a total of 99.2 days, or an average of 16.5 days per judge. Statewide, substitute and recalled judges were used for a total of 4,585.6 days, or 25.3 days per judge.

In the Twenty-sixth Circuit, 5,422 cases were commenced in 1988. Although this represents a 12 percent circuit increase over 1987, Clarke, Page, and Shenandoah County reported decreases in caseload. The majority of the circuit increase in cases occurred among civil cases, which jumped 21.5 percent, to 2,766 cases. Civil cases increased in every locality except Page County, where they fell 13.2 percent. Criminal cases rose only 3.6 percent, to 2,656. Local changes in criminal cases ranged greatly: from a 42.9 percent decrease in Clarke County to a 78.2 percent increase in Rockingham County. One third of the circuit caseload was comprised of equity cases, 18 percent were law cases; 41 percent were felony cases and 8 percent were misdemeanor cases. A greater than average proportion of felony cases were commenced in the Twenty-sixth. Statewide, only 30 percent of commenced cases were felony; 16 percent were misdemeanor, 25 percent were law, and 29 percent were equity cases. The average caseload in the Twenty-sixth Circuit was 1,356 cases. This caseload ranked twenty-first among the 31 Circuits, and was slightly higher than the average caseload among rural districts (1,349 cases per judge). The average civil caseload also ranked twenty-first in the state, and at 692 cases per judge, was higher than the rural average civil caseload (676 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload was 664 cases per judge. This caseload ranked sixteenth in the state, but was below the rural average criminal caseload of 673 cases per judge. Concluded cases increased 23.7 percent in 1988; 5,353 cases were concluded; 2,614 civil and 2,739 criminal. Judge trials concluded 14.8 percent of civil cases and 14.7 percent of criminal cases. Statewide, judge trials ended 12.6 percent of civil cases and 25 percent of criminal cases. Juries trials concluded 1.2 percent of civil cases and 6.8 percent of criminal cases, compared to statewide totals of 1.8 and five percent, respectively. More than 70 percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months of filing. Just over 75 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases are concluded within these periods. The number of juries impaneled in 1988 was 167: the same number as were impaneled in 1987.

In general district court, 89,338 new cases were filed. This represents an increase of only 0.6 percent from 1987. However, this increase was not evenly distributed across the caseload. Criminal cases jumped 17 percent, to 19,139 cases, while civil cases rose only 1.8 percent, to 22,249 cases and traffic cases fell 5.3 percent, to 47,950 cases. Criminal cases comprised 21 percent of the total caseload. Traffic cases comprised 54 percent of the total caseload, and the remaining quarter of the caseload was civil cases. The increase in general district cases was also not evenly distributed across localities. Caseload changes ranged from an 18.7 percent decrease in Frederick County to a 19.1 percent increase in Warren County. The average general district caseload of 22,335 cases per judge ranked twenty-first in the state, and was about 400 cases higher than the average rural caseload of 21,955 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload and the average civil caseload ranked eighteenth and seventeenth among state districts. At 11,998 traffic cases per judge and 5,562 civil cases per judge, these average caseloads were below their average rural counterparts of 12,431 traffic and 5,644 civil cases per judge. However, the average criminal caseload of 4,785 cases per judge was the ninth highest in the state, far above the rural average criminal caseload of 3,879 cases per judge and the statewide average criminal caseload of 4,136 cases per judge. The number of hearings in 1988 (97,558) represented to 7.7 percent increase over 1987.

There was a 9.2 percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in 1988. Clarke County recorded a 44.4 percent increase in juvenile and domestic relations cases. Page County recorded a 3.9 percent decrease, while all other localities reported increases of less than 20 percent. Juvenile cases rose 6.1 percent in the district, to 6,351 new cases. Domestic relations cases increased 16.6 percent, to 2,976 new cases. Juvenile cases comprised 68 percent of the total caseload of 9,327 new cases. Domestic relations cases comprised 32 percent of the total. The average caseload of 4,664 cases per judge was the seventh highest in the state. It was more than 15 percent higher than the state average caseload per judge of 3,895. The average juvenile caseload of 3,176 ranked fifth in the state, and also surpassed the state average juvenile caseload (2,442 cases per judge).

Seventeen magistrates served the Twenty-sixth District in 1987. These magistrates recorded 28,015 activity hours, 31,543 transactions, and 28,672 processes issued. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 87.8 percent, resulted in 18,663 processes issued. Bond hearings, with an issuance rate of 63.3 percent, resulted in 9,030 processes issued. Statewide, the issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 87.2 percent; among bond hearings, that state issuance rate was 61.8 percent. Seventeen civil warrants were issued as well as 962 other processes.

Twenty-seventh Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-seventh Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Bland, Carroll, Floyd, Giles, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski and Wythe and the cities of Galax and Radford. The 1980 Census reported a total population in this area of 223,628 residents. By 1990, the population is expected to increase 7.6 percent, to 240,600. However, the number of juveniles among that population is expected to decrease 2.8 percent during the same period.

The Twenty-seventh Circuit court was served in 1988 by Kenneth I. Devore, A. Dow Owens, Duane E. Mink, and Willis A. Woods. The general district courts were served by George B. Cooley, James H. Joines, Thomas D. Frith, Jr., and Ray W. Grubbs. Judge Grubbs joined the bench April 1, 1988. William F. Thomas, Jr., Jacque Wayne Pierce and James L. Tompkins served the juvenile and domestic relations court. The judges of the Twenty-seventh District used 120.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 17.2 days per judge. Statewide, substitute and recalled judges were used a total of 4,585.8 days, or 25.3 days per judge.

The number of cases commenced in the Twenty-seventh Circuit court rose 2.5 percent in 1988, to 4,420. Locally, changes in the circuit caseload ranged from a 40.7 percent increase in Bland County to a 12.7 percent decrease in Pulaski County. The number of cases concluded in the circuit rose six percent, to 5,384. Civil cases rose 4.6 percent, to 2,971, while the number of criminal cases showed no change, at 2,449. Locally, changes in civil cases ranged from +21.2 percent in Bland County to -11 percent in Floyd County. Changes in criminal cases ranged from a 68.1 percent increase in Bland County to an 18.3 percent decrease in Pulaski County. The caseload distribution was similar to the distribution of the state caseload. Statewide, a quarter of the caseload was law cases; 29 percent were equity cases, 30 percent were felony cases and 16 percent were misdemeanor. The 1988 average caseload per judge was 1,355 cases. This ranked twenty-second among the 31 Circuits, and fell between the statewide average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge and the average caseload among rural districts, 1,349 cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 743 cases per judge ranked eleventh while the average criminal caseload of 612 cases per judge ranked twenty-third. The statewide average civil caseload was 774 cases per judge, while the statewide average criminal caseload was 677 cases per judge. Among rural circuits, the average civil caseload was 676 cases per judge, the average criminal caseload was 673 cases per judge. Of the 3,056 concluded civil cases, 2.5 percent ended in jury trials, 10.9 percent terminated in judge trials. Of the 2,328 concluded criminal cases, 3.2 percent terminated in jury trials, 15.6 percent in judge trials. Statewide, 1.8 percent of civil cases and five percent of criminal cases were concluded in jury trials while 12.6 percent of civil cases and twenty-five percent of criminal cases ended in judge trials. Almost 78 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five moths of filing; 68.4 percent of civil cases were concluded within twelve months. Statewide, 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months and 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within a year. One hundred thirty-two juries were impaneled in 1988: 14 more than in 1987.

The number of new cases filed in general district court rose 4.2 percent in 1988, to 89,356. Local changes ranged from an increase of 40.1 percent in Giles County to a six percent decrease in Carroll County. Criminal cases, which comprised 18 percent of the caseload, rose 6.5 percent, to 16,494. Criminal cases increased in all localities except Grayson County (-13.3 percent) and the City of Radford (-5.6 percent). Traffic cases, sixty percent of the caseload, rose 6.3 percent, to 54,011. Traffic cases fell less than one percent in Grayson and Pulaski counties, just over five percent in Bland County, and 12.8 percent in Carroll County. Civil cases, 21 percent of the caseload, dropped 3.4 percent, to 18,851. In Grayson County civil cases rose sharply; 246.8 percent. Other localities reporting increases in civil cases were: Carroll County, 81.7 percent; Floyd County, 39.1 percent; Giles County, 33.8 percent, and Wythe County, 51.6 percent. The average caseload in the Twenty-seventh was 22,339 cases per judge. This caseload ranked twentieth in the state, falling between the state average general district caseload of 25,729 cases per judge and the average caseload among rural districts, 21,955 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload ranked fifteenth, at 4,124 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload ranked thirteenth, at 13,503. The average civil caseload ranked twenty-fifth, at 4,713 cases per judge. There were 89,164 hearings held in the Twenty-seventh, a 9.3 percent increase over 1987.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court rose thirteen percent in 1988. There were 8,565 new cases filed: 5,611 juvenile and 2,954 domestic relations cases. Juvenile and domestic relations cases fell by one-third in Bland County. Juvenile cases in the Twenty-seventh increased 15.2 percent in 1988, while domestic relations cases increased 9.1 percent. The average caseload per judge was 2,855 cases, and ranked twenty-seventh in the state. The state average caseload was 3,895 cases per judge. The rural average caseload was 3,476 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 1,870 cases per judge and the average domestic relations caseload of 985 cases per judge ranked twenty-fourth and twenty-ninth, respectively. The state average juvenile caseload was 2,442 cases per judge. The rural average juvenile caseload was 2,069 cases per judge. The state average domestic relations caseload was 1,453 cases per judge, while the rural average domestic relations caseload was 1,407 cases per judge.

The twenty-eight magistrates of the Twenty-seventh District recorded 16,321 activity hours, 22,835 transactions, and 16,393 processes issued. Twenty-eighth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-eighth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Smyth and Washington and the city of Bristol. The population of this area, according to the 1980 Census, was 95,895 residents, including 26,953 juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to climb 13.6 percent to 103,400, while the juvenile population is expected to decline to 25,464.

Charles B. Flannagan II and Charles H. Smith, Jr. served the Twenty-eighth Circuit in 1988. David D. Brown and T. L. Hutton, Jr. served the general district court, and Paul D. Greer and Eugene E. Lohman served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Twenty-eighth District used 62.6 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges: an average of 15.7 days per judge. This average was far below the statewide average of 25.3 days per judge.

In the Twenty-eighth Circuit Court, the number of commenced civil cases increased by 3.6 percent, to 1,428, while the number of commenced criminal cases decreased 0.8 percent, to 981. In total, 2,409 cases were commenced in the circuit, an increase of 1.8 percent over 1987. However, Smyth County was the only locality reporting an increase in commenced cases. Smyth County reported a 21.8 percent increase, while Washington County reported a 5.4 percent decrease and the City of Bristol reported a decrease of 4.1 percent. Washington County reported a 7.7 percent decrease in civil cases and a 1.6 percent decrease in criminal cases. In the City of Bristol, criminal cases fell 10.8 percent, while civil cases increased 4.9 percent. The average per judge caseload of 1,205 cases was ranked twenty-seventh in the state, below the state average caseload of 1,452 cases per judge, and below the average caseload among rural circuits of 1,349 cases per judge. The average caseload among civil cases ranked nineteenth in the state, at 714 cases per judge. The average civil caseload in the Twenty-eighth fell between the average civil caseload statewide (774 cases per judge) and the average civil caseload among rural circuits (687 cases per judge). The average criminal caseload ranked thirtieth among 31 circuits. At 491 criminal cases per judge, it was well below the state average criminal caseload (677 cases per judge) and the rural average criminal caseload of 673 cases per judge. Nine hundred twenty-three criminal cases and 1,244 civil cases were concluded in 1988. Eight percent of the concluded criminal cases were terminated by a jury trial and 14.7 percent were concluded after a judge trial. Among civil cases, 20.7 percent were concluded by judge trials and 2.4 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, judge trials terminated 12.6 percent of concluded civil cases and 25 percent of concluded criminal cases. Jury trials ended 1.8 percent of civil cases and five percent of criminal cases statewide. Within twelve months, 78.3 percent of civil cases were concluded. More than 80 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases are concluded in twelve months, and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within five months. One hundred twenty-one juries were impaneled in 1988, two less than in 1987.

New cases in the general district courts increased 8.5 percent. The largest increase was among traffic cases, which rose 11 per cent, to 17,108 new cases filed. Traffic cases comprised 58 percent of the total caseload. Criminal cases, which comprised 22 percent of the caseload, rose 6.3 percent, to 6,604 and civil cases (20 percent of the caseload) rose 4.1 percent, to 5,928 new cases filed. Locally, the largest increase was experienced in the City of Bristol, where general district cases rose 21.7 percent. Smyth and Washington counties reported increases of less than five percent. The total general district caseload of 29,640 resulted in an average caseload per judge of 14,820 cases. This average ranked thirty-first among state districts, well below the state average caseload of 25,729 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 21,955 cases per judge. The average civil caseload also ranked thirty-first, at 2,964 cases per judge. The state average civil caseload was 7,836 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload ranked twenty-seventh, at 8,554 cases per judge, and the average criminal caseload ranked twenty-third, at 3,302 cases per judge. Statewide, these average caseloads were 13,757 traffic cases and 4,136 criminal cases per judge. Among rural districts, the average caseloads were 12,431 traffic and 3,879 criminal cases per judge. There was a seven percent rise in the number of hearings held in the Twenty-eighth district in 1988. Over 27,000 hearings were held, as compared to 25,478 in 1987.

There was a two case increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations court in the Twenty-eighth during 1988. Locally, changes in caseload ranged from a 14 percent increase in Smyth County to a 5.7 percent decrease in Washington County. In 1988, 5,492 cases were filed in the Twenty-eighth: 3,407 juvenile cases and 2,085 domestic relations cases. Juvenile cases comprised 62 percent of the caseload and increased 2.7 percent. However, domestic relations cases, while comprising only 38 percent of the caseload, fell 4.1 percent from 1987. The total average caseload, the juvenile average caseload, and the domestic relations average caseload ranked twenty-ninth, twenty-eighth and twenty-seventh, respectively. These average caseloads were: 2,746 total cases per judge; 1,704 juvenile cases per judge, and 1,043 domestic relations cases per judge. Each of these caseloads were below the state average caseloads, and below the average caseloads for rural districts: 3,476 cases total; 2,069 cases, juvenile, and 1,407 cases, domestic relations.

Eleven magistrates in thee Twenty-eighth district recorded 16,321 activity hours, 22,835 transactions, and 16,393 processes issued. Probable cause hearings resulted in 8,563 processes issued, bond hearings resulted in 4,747 processes issued, and 75 civil warrants and 3,008 other processes were issued. The rate of issuance among probable cause hearings was 75.6 percent, compared to 87.2 percent statewide. The issuance rate among bond hearings was 61.6 percent, just below the state rate of 61.8 percent.

Twenty-ninth Judicial Circuit and District

The Twenty-ninth Circuit serves the counties of Buchanan, Dickenson, Russell, and Tazewell. The 1980 Census reported a total of 140,067 residents in this area, including 44,569 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is expected to increase by 7.9 percent to 151,000. The juvenile population is expected to increase to 46,761.

The Twenty-ninth Circuit Court was served in 1988 by Nicholas E. Persin, Donald A. McGlothlin, Jr., and Donald R. Mullins. Thomas J. Bondurant, Frederick H. Combs and Keary B. Williams served on the general district bench. J. Wesley McClintock, III and Susan Bundy served the juvenile and domestic relations bench. The judges of the Twenty-ninth District used a total of 57.6 days, or an average of 11.5 days per judge, for substitute and retired, recalled judges. Statewide, the average usage was 25.3 days per judge.

The total number of commenced cases in circuit court rose only slightly (0.5 percent) in 1988, to 3,201 cases. This slight total rise, however, was created by a 6.2 percent drop in the number of commenced civil cases (1,973 civil cases in 1988) and a 13.5 percent rise in commenced criminal cases (1,228 criminal cases in 1988). Buchanan County experienced a 5.8 percent rise in civil cases, while the other counties experienced declines, the largest, 15.9 percent, in Tazewell County. The increase in criminal cases was experienced only in Tazewell County, where criminal cases jumped 92.1 percent. Buchanan, Dickenson, and Russell Counties experienced declines in the number of commenced criminal cases. The average total caseload for the Twenty-ninth district was 1,067 cases per judge. This was the lowest average caseload in the state. The state average caseload per judge was 1,452 cases; the average caseload among rural districts was 1,349 cases. The average criminal caseload also ranked thirty-first in the state, at 409 criminal cases per judge. The state average was 677 criminal cases per judge, the rural average was 673 criminal cases per judge. The average civil caseload of 658 cases per judge ranked twenty-fourth in the state. It was only 18 cases lower than the average civil caseload among rural districts: 676 cases per judge. The number of concluded cases rose 1.9 percent in 1988, to 3,193 cases. Of the 2,283 concluded civil cases, 14.1 percent terminated in judge trial, while 1.5 percent terminated in a jury trial. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases concluded in judge trials, 1.8 percent in jury trials. Just over 59 percent of civil cases in the Twenty-ninth were concluded within 12 months of filing. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases were concluded within a year. Over 10 percent of the 910 concluded criminal cases were concluded by jury trial, while 9.5 percent were concluded in judge trials. Statewide, only five percent of criminal cases ended in jury trials, while 25 percent concluded in judge trials. Over 76 percent of criminal cases were concluded within 5 months, compared to 79.5 percent, statewide. The number of juries impaneled in 1988 dropped 6.3 percent, to 134.

A 0.9 percent decrease in the number of new general district cases was reported in the Twenty-ninth. Thirty thousand nine hundred five cases were filed in 1988. However, while Buchanan, Russell, and Tazewell Counties reported caseload declines of 4 percent, 0.4 percent, and 4.7 percent, respectively, Dickenson County experienced a 21.9 percent increase in the number of new cases filed. The district reported a 9.6 percent decrease in criminal cases (6,913 cases filed), a 1.6 percent decrease in traffic cases (13,620 cases filed), and a 7 percent increase in civil cases filed. Criminal cases comprised 22 percent of the total caseload. Traffic cases comprised 44 percent of the total caseload, and the remaining 34 percent of the caseload was civil cases. The average caseload per judge was 10,302 cases: the lowest in the state. The average caseload statewide was 25,729 cases per judge, and the average caseload among rural districts was 21,955 cases per judge. The average criminal and traffic cases, at 2,304 criminal and 4,540 traffic cases per judge also ranked lowest in the state, well below state and rural averages. The average civil caseload of 3,457 cases per judge ranked twenty-ninth in the state, below the state and rural averages (7,836 and 5,644 cases per judge, respectively). The number of hearings in the Twenty-ninth decreased 3.5 percent, to 34,044 hearings.

In the Twenty-ninth District, there was a 4 percent increase in the number of new cases filed in juvenile and domestic relations cases: 6,137 cases. This increase was only experienced in Dickenson and Tazewell Counties, however. Buchanan and Russell Counties experienced declines among both juvenile and domestic relations cases. In total juvenile and domestic relations cases filed, Buchanan and Russell Counties reported decreases of 2.9 percent and 22.4 percent, respectively. In the entire district, juvenile cases, of which 3,518 were filed, comprised 57 percent of the caseload. Domestic relations cases, of which there were 2,619 filed, represented 43 percent of the caseload. The total number of juvenile cases dropped 2.7 percent, resulting in an average juvenile caseload of 1,759 cases per judge, which ranked twenty-sixth in the state. The state average juvenile caseload was 2,442 cases peer judge. The total number of domestic relations cases increased 14 percent, resulting in an average caseload of 1,310 domestic relations cases per judge. This average caseload ranked nineteenth in the state, just below the rural average domestic relations caseload of 1,407 cases per judge. The total juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 3,079 cases per judge and ranked twenty-fifth statewide. The state average juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 3,895 cases per judge.

The 15 magistrates of the Twenty-ninth recorded 16,695 activity hours, 21,197 transactions, and 15,061 processes issued. Fifty-seven civil warrants were issued, 8,570 processes were issued after probable cause hearings, 4,992 were issued after bond hearings, and 1,442 other processes were issued. Probable cause hearings statewide had an 87.2 percent issuance rate. Bond hearing had a 61.8 percent issuance rate statewide. In the Twenty-ninth, these rates were 82.6 and 60.2 percent, respectively.

Thirtieth Judicial Circuit and District

The Thirtieth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Lee, Scott, and Wise and the city of Norton. The 1980 Census reported a total of 99,644 residents in this area, including 29,586 juveniles. By 1990, the total population is projected to increase by 9.5 percent to 109,100, and the juvenile population is expected to increase to 31,370.

William C. Fugate and John Robert Stump served the Thirtieth Circuit in 1988. Robert T. Winston, Jr. served on the circuit bench until his death on March 20, 1988. James C. Roberson joined the bench July 1,1988, having served on the general district court prior to that time. Serving the Thirtieth general district court in 1988 were: R. Larry Lewis and James C. Roberson (until his election to the Circuit Court) and Suzanne K. Fulton who took the general district bench July 1,1988. David B. Summerfield and Elizabeth S. Sturgill served on the juvenile and domestic relations bench in 1988. The judges of the Thirtieth used a total of 71.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. This averages to 18 days per judge, below the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

There were 3,453 commenced cases in the Thirtieth Circuit in 1988: an 11.2 percent increase over the previous year. Locally, the largest increase was experienced in Scott County, where the number of commenced cases rose 23 percent. Civil cases in the circuit rose only 0.9 percent, to 1,554 cases. Criminal cases increased 21.3 percent, to 1,899 cases. Wise County experienced a decline of 1.3 percent in civil cases. However, Wise County was solely responsible for the recorded increase in criminal cases. Criminal cases commenced dropped 16.8 percent in Lee County and 6.9 percent in Scott County, but increased ten percent in Wise County. The distribution of the caseload was: 17 percent law, 28 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 25 percent misdemeanor. Statewide, the distribution was: 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload in the Thirtieth Circuit was 1,151 cases per judge. The average caseload statewide was 1,452 cases per judge. Among rural circuits, the average caseload was 1,349 cases per judge. The average civil caseload was 518 cases per judge. Statewide, the average civil caseload was 774 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload of 633 cases per judge ranked twenty-second among thirty-one circuits. It was only 40 cases below the rural average criminal caseload of 673 cases per judge. There were 3,991 cases concluded in 1988: a 50 percent increase over 1987. One of the reasons for this increase was the purging of 949 civil cases under the five-year rule. These purged cases comprised 42.8 percent of the 2,215 concluded civil cases. Among concluded civil cases, 1.9 percent were terminated in jury trials and 12.6 percent were terminated in judge trials. These proportions are nearly identical to the state totals of 1.8 percent concluded in jury trials and 12.6 percent concluded in judge trials. Among the 1,776 criminal cases that were concluded in 1988, 13.1 percent were terminated in a judge trial and 10.2 percent ended in jury trials. Statewide, five percent of criminal cases concluded in jury trials, 25 percent in judge trials. Thirty-nine percent of civil cases were concluded within 12 months; 63.3 percent of criminal cases were concluded within 5 months. Statewide, 62 percent of civil cases and 79.5 percent of criminal cases were concluded within these periods. One hundred sixty juries were impaneled in 1988: a 79.8 percent increase over 1987.

In general district court, new cases increased 8.3 percent in 1988, to 29,846 cases filed. The number of new criminal cases fell 12.1 percent, to 7,300 new cases, but the number of traffic cases, which comprised 57 percent of the total caseload, jumped 21.4 percent, to 17,090 new cases. New civil cases also rose, 5.3 percent to 5,456 new cases. Locally, Lee County experienced a 6.3 percent increase in criminal cases, and the largest (43.8 percent) increase in traffic cases. Lee County, however, experienced a 9.6 percent drop in new civil cases, while Scott and Wise Counties experienced increases of 22 and 11.1 percent, respectively. The average caseload in the Thirtieth General District Court was 14,923 cases per judge. This was well below the state average caseload of 25,729 cases per judge and the rural average caseload of 21,955 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 3,650 cases per judge. The average traffic caseload was 8,545 cases per judge, and the average civil caseload was 2,728 cases per judge. All these averages fell below the state and rural average caseloads. The rural average caseloads were: 3,879 criminal, 9,744 traffic, and 5,644 civil cases per judge. There were 41,543 hearings held in 1988, a 0.9 percent drop from 1987.

In juvenile and domestic relations court, new cases rose 14.7 percent. Juvenile cases, representing 55 percent of the caseload, rose 18.1 percent. Domestic relations cases rose 10.8 percent. In total, 3,197 new juvenile cases and 2,613 domestic relations cases were filed in the Thirtieth. In Lee County, the number of domestic relations cases dropped 6.7 percent. However, Lee County experienced the greatest percentage increase in juvenile cases: 47.5 percent, compared to 17.9 percent in Scott County and 9.3 percent in Wise County. The average caseload in the Thirtieth Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court was 2,905 cases per judge. The average caseload among rural districts was 3,476 cases per judge. The average juvenile caseload of 1,599 cases per judge and the average domestic relations caseload of 1,307 cases per judge were also below the state and rural averages. The rural averages were: 2,069 juvenile and 1,407 domestic relations cases per judge.

Eleven magistrates recorded 14,487 activity hours, 20,353 transactions and 15,609 processes issued in 1988. Probable cause hearings, with an issuance rate of 90.2 percent, resulted in 8,437 processes issued. Bond hearings recorded an issuance rate of 60.8 percent, and resulted in 5,296 processes issued. Statewide, the issuance rate among probable cause hearings was 87.2 percent, and among bond hearings, 61.8 percent. Three hundred sixty other processes were issued as well as 1,514 civil warrants.

Thirty-first Judicial Circuit and District

Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park are served by the Thirty-first Circuit. The 1980 Census recorded a population of 166,665 residents in this area, of which 60,948 were juveniles. By 1990, the population is expected to increase by 32.4 percent to 220,700. The juvenile population is expected to increase 18 percent, to 70,855.

H. Selwyn Smith, Percy Thornton, Jr. Herman A. Whisenant, Jr., and Frank A. Hoss, Jr. served the Thirty-first Circuit Court in 1988. William D. Hamblen, William R. Murphy, Joseph A. Gallagher, and Richard B. Potter served the general district court. Judge Potter joined the bench July 1, 1988, filling the new judgeship created by the 1988 General Assembly. Serving the juvenile and domestic relations court in 1988 were Raymond O. Kellam, Patrick D. Molinari, and William A. Becker. The judges of the Thirty-first used a total 68.8 days for substitute and retired, recalled judges. The average of 9.8 days per judge was less than half the state average of 25.3 days per judge.

The Thirty-first Circuit experienced an 11.2 percent increase in the number of commenced cases in 1988. A total of 6,441 cases were commenced: 3,578 civil cases and 2,863 criminal cases. These figures represent a 5.8 percent increase in the number of civil cases and an 18.8 percent jump in the number of criminal cases. The caseload distribution in the Thirty-first was: 23 percent law, 32 percent equity, 29 percent felony, and 15 percent misdemeanor. This differed only slightly from the statewide distribution of 25 percent law, 29 percent equity, 30 percent felony, and 16 percent misdemeanor. The average caseload per judge in the Thirty-first was 1,610 cases. This was the third highest average caseload in the state. The average caseload statewide was 1,452 cases per judge. Among urban circuits, the average caseload was 1,527 cases per judge. The average civil caseload ranked fifth in the state, at 895 cases per judge. The state average civil caseload was 774 cases per judge. The urban average civil caseload was 847 cases per judge. The average criminal caseload was 716 cases per judge, and ranked tenth in the state. The average criminal caseload surpassed the state average criminal caseload of 677 cases per judge and the urban average criminal caseload of 680 cases per judge. There was a 25 percent increase in the number of concluded cases in 1988. Almost 6,000 cases were concluded: 3,223 civil cases and 2,690 criminal cases. Among civil cases, 10.7 percent were terminated in judge trials, and 1.4 percent were concluded in jury trials. Statewide, 12.6 percent of civil cases were concluded in judge trials, and 1.8 percent were concluded in jury trials. Eighteen percent of criminal cases concluded in judge trials, while 5.7 percent were terminated in jury trials. Statewide, jury trials concluded five percent of criminal cases and judge trials terminated 25 percent. Four fewer juries were impaneled in 1988 than in 1987, a 2.9 percent drop, from 138 to 134 juries impaneled.

New cases filed in general district court rose 9.5 percent, to 93,087. Criminal cases, comprising 17 percent of the total caseload, rose 18.3 percent, to 15,385 cases. Traffic cases comprised 63 percent of the caseload, and rose 5.4 percent, to 59,000. Twenty percent of the caseload was civil cases, which rose 16.8 percent, to 18,702. The average caseload per judge was 23,272 cases. This caseload ranked seventeenth among the 32 districts. The state average caseload was 25,729. The average criminal caseload ranked nineteenth, at 3,846 cases per judge. The state average caseload was 4,136 criminal cases per judge. The average traffic caseload was 14,750 cases per judge, eleventh highest in the state. It surpassed the state average traffic caseload of 13,757 cases per judge, and approached the average traffic caseload among urban districts: 14,852 cases per judge. The average civil caseload ranked twenty-sixth. At 4,676 cases per judge, it fell well below the statewide average of 7,836 civil cases per judge. The number of hearings held in 1988 (88,124) represented a 12.1 percent increase over 1987.

New cases in juvenile and domestic relations court experienced a 9.7 percent rise, to 12,313 cases. Juvenile cases rose 12.4 percent, to 9,009, while domestic relations cases rose three percent, to 3,304 cases. Juvenile cases comprised 73 percent of the total caseload. The average caseload in 1988 was 4,104 cases per judge. This average caseload was the twelfth highest in the state, falling between the average caseload statewide (3,895 cases per judge) and the average caseload among urban districts (4,328 cases per judge). The average juvenile caseload ranked sixth in the state. At 3,003 cases per judge, it surpassed both the state and urban averages of 2,442 cases per judge and 2,829 cases per judge, respectively. The average domestic relations caseload ranked twenty-sixth in the state, at 1,101 cases per judge. It fell below both urban and state average caseloads (1,500 and 1,453 cases per judge, respectively).

The eleven magistrates of the Thirty-first District recorded 19,912 activity hours, 47,994 transactions, and 36,472 processes issued. The Thirty-first recorded a 93.4 percent issuance rate among probable cause hearings and a 53.1 percent issuance rate among bond hearings. Statewide, the issuance rate at probable cause hearings was 87.2 percent, and among bond hearings, 61.8 percent. Fifteen thousand seven hundred one (15,701) processes were issued for probable cause, 11,792 were issued for bonds, 615 were issued for civil warrants, and 8,319 other processes were issued.
